LBJ Acts On Army Statement

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—An additional 1,400 U.S. troops will be coming home soon from the Dominican Republic, President Johnson announced Saturday.

Johnson, acting on the recommendation of the troop commanders of the inter-American force guarding the uneasy truce in Santo Domingo, ordered the withdrawal of two battalions of the 82nd Airborne Division.

The President said in a statement that Gen. Hugh Panasco Alvim of Brazil, commander of the force and the deputy commander, U.S. Lt. Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr., advised him "conditions in the Dominican Republic now permit further withdrawal of U.S. military personnel."

He said also the generals' recommendation has the concurrence of the special committee of the Organization of American States and U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett.

"It will be an orderly withdrawal beginning next week," White House press secretary George E. Reedy told newsmen. Asked whether the action could be interpreted as a new sign of hope for the solution of the political crisis in the island republic, Reedy said:

"We are hopeful as we have been from the beginning that a satisfactory solution will be found."

In Washington, the Defense Department identified the two battalions that will return as the 1st Battalion of the 508th Airborne Infantry and the 1st Battalion of the 505th.

The first battalion will return within a week and the other shortly thereafter, the department reported.

The new withdrawal will reduce to about 10,900 the number of U.S. troops and airmen on duty at Santo Domingo. This compares with peak strength of about 22,000.

Johnson announced also the committee on international monetary affairs, took care of some other government business, and still found time for a bit of relaxation.

He also saw an old friend, U.S. Dist. Court Judge Homer Thornberry, sworn in as a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit.

Japanese Upper House Election To Test Gov't.

TOKYO (AP)—The popularity of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's eight-month-old government will be put to the test in Sunday's election of 127 members of the 250-seat upper house of Parliament.

One major question is how much the nation favors the Sato government siding with U.S. policy in Viet Nam. This had been an issue in the campaign, with Socialists and others calling for U.S. withdrawal from South Viet Nam.

Sato's Liberal Democrat party, confident of returning all 75 incumbents to maintain its 144-seat, needs a mandate to consolidate its position. Sato took over last November from Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda, who was ill.

Fifty seats, plus two vacancies, being contested by 99 candidates, are at stake from the nation at large and 75 seats are being sought by 233 candidates in local constituencies.

A total of 61,672,472 Japanese are eligible to vote at 45,466 polling places. The polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 6 p.m.

Although voting may be postponed in some districts of Kyushu, southern Japan, hard hit by heavy rains Friday, early returns are expected by mid-night Sunday. Final results in the local contests are expected by Monday noon and nationwide finals by early Tuesday.

Turnout at the polls is not expected to top the last upper house election's 68.21 per cent. Most public opinion polls predict Sato's party will lose a minimum of five seats, but this still will give it a majority.

The Socialists, who held 65 seats before election are expected of returning all 29 up for re-election.

The Neo-Buddhist Soka Gakkai's Komeito has 14 candidates. It holds only four seats.

Russians Claim Enough Missiles For Retaliation

MOSCOW (AP)—Leonid I. Brezhnev claimed Saturday the Soviet Union has enough nuclear-armed missiles ready for immediate launching "to finish off once and for all" any attackers.

This country also has "achieved important successes in the creation of antimissile defense facilities," the first secretary of the Soviet Communist party added.

He accused unnamed American officials of nuclear blackmail by claiming the United States has missile superiority over the Soviet Union.

Brezhnev spoke to military academy graduates at a Kremlin reception three days after Washington announced the United States has 800 Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles in firing position.

The Soviet Union has 270 intercontinental missiles, according to intelligence reports made available in Washington at the time of the announcement. Brezhnev denounced these reports and hinted the West knows better.

"The figures and estimates adduced in the West about the nuclear missile power of the Soviet Union do no credit at all to the information possessed by their compilers, particularly the intelligence services of the imperialist states," he said.

"It is hardly necessary here to give concrete figures" on the number of Soviet missiles, Brezhnev said, "but I can tell you one thing definitely: they are perfectly sufficient to finish off once and for all any aggressor or any group of aggressors."

Brezhnev said it was already known the Soviet Union had achieved successes in antimissile defenses and "further important steps were taken lately, which raised their efficiency sharply."

In the past claims that the Soviet Union could knock down any missile have been greeted by skepticism in the West.

Brezhnev's more cautious wording of successes in creating such ability rather than already having it suggested work is still going on toward a tight defense.

Political Harmony In Making

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. policymakers expect a new chapter in the Dominican story to begin shortly with an announcement in Santo Domingo of agreement on a provisional government.

It is understood that President Johnson's newly announced order for a further U.S. paratrooper withdrawal is based on an encouraging assessment of the Dominican political outlook as well as on the recent drop in shooting incidents.

The Organization of American States negotiating team at Santo Domingo is reported to be putting the finishing touches on a plan under which a Dominican provisional government would be created to succeed the regime overthrown April 24.

Elections for a regular government would be held some months hence, perhaps early next year.

Both the junta and the rebel factions are said to have found a well-known Dominican doctor, Felix A. Goico, acceptable as head of a caretaker regime. If no last-minute hitches develop, U.S. officials figure an agreement can be announced within the next few days.

U.S. pleasure at the prospect of clearing this obstacle in the Dominican difficulty is tempered by expectation of a long and arduous job still ahead in rebuilding the revolt-shattered Caribbean country.

So far about $40 million in American economic aid—not counting expenditure for U.S. troops—has gone into keeping the Dominican economy afloat since April. Substantial U.S. aid is expected to continue for years.

U.S. officials note that the Dominican Republic's economy has been suffering from low world prices for its products and high domestic production costs. Its coffee is in surplus, its banana crop has been hit by disease and a lengthy drought severely hurt agriculture generally.

On the political side, the process of building genuine democratic institutions also is expected to take years. The 30-year Trujillo dictatorship, in the opinion of U.S. officials, left the population sorely lacking experience in self-government and in the civic consciousness which is the backbone of a democratic society.

ASKS RETRACTION OF CRITICISM CONCERNING DALEY

CHICAGO (AP)—A City Hall spokesman called upon a national church leader Saturday to retract his criticism of Mayor Richard J. Daley.

He made the suggestion after a delegation of 77 clergymen and laymen from the national convention of the United Church of Christ marched around the City Hall.

Jack Reilly, an assistant to Daley, "invited" a retraction by Dr. Robert W. Spike of New York City, director of the National Council of Churches' Commission on Religion and Race.

Dr. Spike, in a speech to the United Church of Christ meeting Friday, accused Mayor Daley of an intemperate attack on demonstrators who have been marching on the City Hall almost every day since June 10, demanding the ouster of School Supt. Benjamin C. Willis. The demonstrators blame Willis for the de facto segregation in public schools.

Daley had stated Wednesday that Communists are aiding the demonstrators.

VANDALS MAR MONUMENT

BAMBERG, Germany (AP)—Vandals struck in Bamberg again Saturday, smearing blue and gray paint on a monument erected at the site of the Nazi-destroyed Bamberg synagogue.

The monument was smeared with swastikas and pro-Nazi and anti-Semitic slogans shortly before it was dedicated three weeks ago. This marked the start of one of the worst outbreaks of antisemitism in Germany since the end of World War II.

Luci Johnson Has First Communion

WASHINGTON (AP)—Luci Johnson received her first communion Saturday in the Roman Catholic Church, into which she was baptized on her 18th birthday Friday.

The younger daughter of President and Mrs. Johnson received communion with a group of friends at a low Mass in the chapel of St. Ann's Infant Home in suburban Hyattsville, Md.

The Rev. James Montgomery, chaplain at the home who has been giving Luci instruction in the Catholic faith for some time, distributed the communion. Under the Roman Catholic doctrine, one who receives communion enters into a personal relationship with Christ.

Luci wore a white suit, white shoes and a white mantilla. She

Shots Hit Home Of Ex-Dominican President

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Three shots were fired early Saturday at the home of former President Joaquin Balaguer, who returned this week from exile to play a political role in his troubled country.

The shots came from a car that sped past the house at 2 a.m. One bullet smashed a glass panel in the front door of the large, Spanish colonial-style house. Two others apparently hit a retaining wall.

A policeman guarding the house said he fired four times at the fleeing car but did not think he hit it. Balaguer said he slept through the shooting and dismissed it as a matter of no importance.

President Johnson and a spokesman for the inter-American force announced the United States will withdraw 1,400 more troops from the Dominican Republic. This will reduce the American force to 10,900 from its peak of 22,000 at the height of the crisis between the rebel regime and the civilian-military junta.

A spokesman for Lt. Gen. Hugo Panasco Alvim, Brazilian commander of the inter-American force, said two battalions from the 82nd Airborne Division will be withdrawn within a week.

There are 1,600 troops in the force from Latin-American countries—1,200 from Brazil and small units from Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and El Salvador.

Conditions in the Dominican Republic now permit further withdrawal of U.S. military forces," a brief inter-American force announcement said.

An Organization of American States mediating committee, headed by Ellsworth Bunker of the United States, continued negotiations to set up a provisional government satisfactory to the rival regimes.

Dr. Felix A. Goico, 60, a surgeon, is considered the leading candidate to head the government. Both sides have termed him acceptable. OAS sources said, however, that Goico might wind up with only a cabinet post because he lacks political experience.

Balaguer served as Dominican president during and just after the Rafael L. Trujillo dictatorship, which ended with Trujillo's assassination in 1961. He returned Monday from exile in the United States and announced that he would be a presidential candidate in elections to be held in six to nine months under an OAS peace plan. Observers say Balaguer has major political support.

Treasurer Urges Aid Passage

CHICAGO (AP)—Illinois Treasurer William J. Scott urged Gov. Otto Kerner Saturday not to make the "tragic mistake" of vetoing state aid to education because of a miscalculation of funds available in the treasury.

"Gov. Kerner unfortunately just does not understand state finances when he says that he may once again veto additional state aid to education because of lack of funds," the Republican treasurer said at a press conference.

Kerner, a Democrat, said Thursday shortly after the close of the 1965 session of the Illinois Legislature that he may have to veto major spending bills because the Republican-controlled Senate left him with a $180 million deficit by killing revenue legislation.

He hinted that he may veto a bill authorizing $330 per pupil state aid to schools. The present law provides for $252 per pupil.

"The governor is just wrong when he says that there won't be enough money to pay for the increase," Scott asserted.

"As of June 30, funds in the general revenue accounts total $144,165,147 plus an additional $15,735,179 in the clearing accounts for a cash balance of almost $160 million," Scott said. "From this amount approximately $50 million in outstanding bills and warrants must be subtracted, leaving a total surplus as of today of $110 million."

Scott also said Kerner had overlooked the fact that the treasury already has $28,381,467 in funds which have been set aside to pay the interest and principle due on university and mental health building bonds during the next two years.

And Kerner's figures do not take into account the fact that the treasurer's office will earn more than $40 million during the next biennium on the investment of state funds, Scott said.

"Kerner will have a billion and a half dollars more to work with this biennium than any governor in the history of Illinois," the state treasurer said, "and it would be a sad thing indeed if the education of the children of this state takes second place to padded political payrolls."

Scott said that two months after Kerner vetoed the school aid bill two years ago he found he had a $95-million surplus in the general revenue fund.

At his press conference Thursday Kerner said the Republican senators were "planning for political opportunity" by making the budget slashes.

"This is the same thing they did to me two years ago," he said. "They voted more funds for schools, but didn't give me the revenue. I had to veto it. They're trying to do the same political thing this time."

100 CIVIL RIGHTERS MARCH IN JACKSON

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—More than 100 civil rights demonstrators marched silently around closed city and state buildings without incident Saturday.

Initiated by a group of Jackson Negro ministers and businessmen, the march followed two days of similar protests by the Freedom Democratic Party.

Saturday shoppers paused briefly and cast curious glances at the column of pairs walking through downtown Jackson, around the governor's mansion and city hall.

Some marchers carried signs protesting segregation. The march came in the wake of a federal court order for the city to halt its "instant arrests," which had put more than 1,000 demonstrators in jail since June 14.

The original marches by the Freedom Democratic Party came when Gov. Paul Johnson called a special legislative session, during which laws that eased restrictions on voting were passed.

13 YEAR OLD GIRL WINS ESSAY CONTEST

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Green-eyed, Susan Swenson, 13, Concord, N.H., has been chosen "National Yankee Doodle Dandy" for her essay of "What My American Freedoms Mean to Me."

The winner, victorious over boys and girls from 13 states, all of whom were born on July 4, will present her essay from the platform at Independence Hall at the annual Independence Day celebration, July 5.

She will be sharing speaking honors with U.S. Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach and Mayor James Tate.

N. Viets Stage Attack On Base

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Viet Cong guerrillas laid down another mortar attack Saturday on a U.S.-South Vietnamese air installation but with little effect, U. S. military officials reported.

The predawn attack took place at Can Tho, South Viet Nam's third largest city, about 80 miles southwest of Saigon. It was the fourth air installation to come under mortar attack since Thursday, when guerrillas slipped past tight defenses to hit the vast air base at Da Nang with a damaging attack.

OVER 175 DEAD

Death Rate Now At Record Pace

Highway fatalities mounted Saturday at a rate which safety experts said indicated a record number of deaths could occur during this Fourth of July holiday weekend.

A total of 116 deaths was reported through the early afternoon hours.

The National Safety Council said this was considerably ahead of the 1964 July 4th weekend when 510 persons perished—a record for a three-day Independence Day observance.

Five persons in one car died near Waterloo, N.Y. Saturday when their vehicle collided head-on with a Greyhound bus. Authorities said the auto had crossed the center line of the rain-slicked New York State Thruway. It was the most spectacular and tragic accident reported so far.

Roads were clogged as millions of motorists sought a holiday change of pace from normal routine. The weather was generally fair over the nation but safety experts urged extra vigilance by motorists because of the heavy traffic.

The safety council has estimated that in the 78 hours which started at 6 p.m. Friday and end at midnight Monday local time between 470 and 570 persons will lose their lives in traffic mishaps.

The council figures that motorists will drive nine billion miles before the weekend period ends Monday night. The council said that in a corresponding summer weekend period of 78 hours not involving a holiday 435 deaths were reported on the highways.

Free 22 Ships In Maritime Strike Break

NEW YORK (AP)—A break in the 18-day-old U.S. maritime strike freed 22 tankers to sail Saturday, but prospects appeared dim for settlements releasing another 100 idled ships.

No talks were on the calendar for the long holiday weekend and federal mediators returned to Washington.

The strike by three AFL-CIO unions—representing deck officers, radio officers and engineering officers—caused two military cargoes, normally exempt from such disputes, to be shifted to foreign flag vessels for shipment.

Scheduled sailings Saturday of the United States, the Argentina and two other liners were canceled, leaving 3,000 passengers to search for other transportation.

Late Friday night the American Radio Association reached a contract agreement with the Tanker Service Committee, representing 12 companies operating 65 tankers.

This freed only the Gulf Oil Corp.'s 22 tankers, since Gulf's deck officers are not represented by the International Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots, which also struck the tanker companies.

The tanker companies settled earlier with the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, which is striking passenger and freighter lines.

PLAN MOON MINING WASHINGTON (AP)—Even the U.S. Bureau of Mines—still faithfully sticking to its digging—has joined the effort to land on the moon.

The Interior Department said Saturday the bureau has started research on how to mine on the moon.

"Mining useful materials on the moon—instead of rocketing them from earth—will make lunar exploration parties more nearly self-sufficient than would otherwise be possible," the bureau said.

Long Summer For Johnson On Policies

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson is heading into a long summer likely to be marked by continued congressional bickering over his Viet Nam policies and stiffened resistance to his domestic programs.

Prospective further acceleration in the Southeast Asia fighting seems certain to keep the fires of debate burning in both the Senate and House. But while the legislators are arguing over foreign affairs they also will be acting on some of the President's most controversial domestic proposals.

Johnson is virtually assured of enactment of measures largely meeting his requests on Negro voting rights, Social Security and health care, an urban affairs (Cabinet) department, education, plus a proposed constitutional amendment on presidential disability.

Combined with excise tax reduction, federal aid to secondary schools and Appalachia aid already approved, these measures will add up to a program such as few presidents ever have been able to get enacted in one session of Congress.

But Johnson has made it clear he will not be satisfied to let some of his more controversial proposals go over until the election-year session of 1966.

Under this circumstance, administration leaders are girding for some tough battles over five proposals the President has laid down and one on which he has declined to take a public stand—a proposed constitutional amendment to permit state voters to determine whether one house of their legislature may be apportioned on other than a population basis.

High on the list of the most disputed measures is a bill to extend and revise federal farm programs. As it stands now, the measure doesn't even cover cotton and dairy products. A Donnybrook lies ahead when it hits the Senate floor.

Johnson is pushing also for action on a bill to amend the Taft-Hartley Act to eliminate state authority to outlaw union shop labor contracts. Senate opponents will be ready when this comes up with a mountain of amendments restricting union activities.

There is trouble ahead for Johnson's proposal to expand the coverage of the minimum-wage law. Lobbying against the inclusion of laundry, retail store clerks and others has been intensive. On the other side, organized labor has been campaigning for an increase in the present $1.25-an-hour level, an action which Johnson didn't recommend.

The President's proposal for abolishing the national origins quotas of the immigration law has run into stiff opposition in committee hearings and its fate remains in doubt.

While Johnson may get action—not always pleasing to him—on these measures, his recommendation to increase benefits and set up federal standards on unemployment compensation seems likely to be shelved for this year.

Most controversial of all may be the proposed constitutional amendment on legislative apportionment. Unless they can get the votes—and they don't have them yet—to defeat a proposal which requires a two-thirds majority for passage, Senate liberals have threatened to filibuster.

The President seems likely to come up with additional recommendations for a Congress already well-supplied with work.

A U.S. military spokesman said the Viet Cong fired 20 to 30 mortar rounds onto the edge of the field at Can Tho, then lobbed another 10 several hours later, hitting a few outposts 3,000 yards from the air strip.

The spokesman reported no casualties and no damage to the air strip.

Government troops responded with mortar fire of their own. Planes at the base took off in search of the guerrillas under the light of flares. By dawn the guerrillas had vanished into the jungles.

South Vietnamese troops began pulling out of a valley near Cheo Reo, reliable sources said. Sharp fighting erupted there earlier in the week and on Friday a mortar attack damaged three U.S. helicopters at the air field. The informants said the troops withdrew apparently in the belief that no further contact with the Viet Cong was imminent. Cheo Reo is 220 miles northwest of Saigon.

Near Da Nang government troops killed six guerrillas who refused to come out of a cave, a U.S. Army spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the Vietnamese unit fired into the cave after the guerrillas tossed out hand grenades, wounding five Vietnamese soldiers and one U.S. Army adviser. A wounded Viet Cong was captured with what the spokesman called intelligence documents in his possession.

The incident occurred on a search and destroy operation by 500 government troops near the village of Tra Khe.

U.S. warplanes continued raids on Communist North Viet Nam.

Twelve A4 Skyhawks from the Navy carried Independence hit the Qui Hau ammunition depot, 45 miles southwest of Hanoi, dumping five tons of bombs into the complex. Pilots reported a number of hits and said they spotted what may have been secondary explosions, indicating hits on ammunition stores.

Other U.S. Air Force and Navy planes hammered at bridges, a truck depot, highways and ferry and coastal facilities.

Air Force pilots reported sinking 15 of 30 barges just off the port city of Vinh and destroying a bridge south of the city.

U.S. officials reported no plane losses. U.S. Navy informants said a Soviet trawler has been circling the area between the Red Chinese island of Hainan and Da Nang.

The informants described the vessel as having a radar bulb on its superstructure. U.S. officials in Saigon declined to comment on the information.

U.S. 7th Fleet sources said fleet officers did not seem particularly disturbed by the trawler, although they conceded it apparently was spying.

"We outrun it easily," one officer said. "We cruise at about 20 knots. She does about eight."

1966 IS RICE YEAR
ROME (AP) — The council of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization has designated 1966 as "International Rice Year." Noting that about half the human race makes rice the daily staple food, it said the idea is to encourage governments and individuals to make concerted efforts to promote rice production, trade and consumption.

Beardstown Factory Tests Trigger Mittens

By VIRGIL REITHER
BEARDSTOWN — American soldiers in cold climes of many parts of the world may one day be wearing trigger mittens which were given preliminary and experimental tests in the Illinois Glove company's Beardstown plant.

Herman Madnick of the U.S. Army Natick Laboratories at Natick, Mass., has been working in the Beardstown plant for the past several days, having a dozen or so trigger mittens which he designed made up for Army tests.

Mr. Madnick arrived Monday and left Thursday after announcing that the Beardstown plant certainly could manufacture the item. He stated, however, that he has nothing to do with government contracts and that if the mitten he designed passes tests and is adopted as an item of soldier subsistence the local plant could only bid on a contract like any other plant in the nation.

The Natick labs compose a research and development facility for subsistence items for soldiers and such items as clothing, food, shoes and headwear.

Mr. Madnick's experience in glove-making and leather goods has been put to good use in many experiments by the army but he also has had a leading part in the testing of foods, some of which were finally utilized in the last U.S. space flight.

The new mitten, designed by Madnick, has a leather palm and trigger finger and is backed with nylon-cotton-sateen, and is lightly insulated. The finger leather is particularly flexible.

According to Mr. Madnick, the Illinois Glove factory's local plant is a "very capable factory" and its people seem "particularly adept" for the work they do here, and he was greatly pleased with the success of his experimentation.

The plant, employing about 125 persons, and producing 19,000 pairs of gloves weekly, has had many government contracts and is producing for a government contract at the present time.

A trigger mitten was developed by the factory for use by soldiers in the Korean War, according to Manager William Shmiller.

"We saved the government several million dollars on that item," Shmiller said.

The Beardstown plant produces leather work gloves, welders gloves, linemen's leather protective gloves and many other items produced not only for the army but for commercial outlets throughout the country.

Deerskin, cowhide, horsehide, sheepskin and pig leather are utilized in the operation. Of deerskin it is said that it is most adaptable for use in low temperatures since it remains flexible at 40 degrees below zero.

Illinois Glove is the successor to Wells Lamont, which was in Beardstown for about 20 years.

The Beardstown firm is now closed starting vacations and during this time the entire plant will be re-wired.

Employees, many of them women, are not only from Beardstown but from Browning, Bader, Frederick, Arenzville and other towns in the area.

Prepare a pie from a package of chocolate pudding mix and a baked 8-inch pastry shell. Cover the top copiously with flaked coconut and garnish with orange sections.

Death Penalty Dying Out As Murders Increase

Outlawed In 5 States This Year

By MAGGIE SAVOY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Capital punishment is as old as the cup of hemlock, and the crimes for which it has been imposed range from murder to consorting with gypsies.

But is it moral, and does it do any good?

Those questions may never be answered with finality, but the fact is that the death penalty is dying out in the United States. Even as the murder rate rises.

Last year 9,270 men, women and children were murdered in this country. Only 15 murderers were executed. Thirty years ago, in 1935, 199 criminals were executed, from a much smaller population.

Michigan was the first state to abolish the death penalty, back in 1847. Over the years, seven more states took such action — Alaska, Hawaii, Maine, Minnesota, North Dakota, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. This year alone, five more states have outlawed the death penalty — Oregon, Iowa, West Virginia, Vermont and New York. In some of these states the prohibition is not total. New York, for example, still has the death penalty for murder of a policeman or duty.

Moratoriums have been proclaimed in other states and nations. In Great Britain, where, after years of study by a royal commission on capital punishment, an abolition bill has passed the House of Commons; in Canada, where Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, awaiting parliamentary passage of its bill commuted all death sentences; in Tennessee, where

4-H UNIT PREPARES TO EXHIBIT WORK

Members of the Lucky Clovers 4-H club prepared for local and county achievement programs during a meeting held July 1.

Linda Eades, delegate to the state 4-H convention held recently at the University of Illinois, presented her report.

Demonstrations were given by Dorothy Coveny, Donna Smith and Anne Warren. Talks were presented by Paula Silvers and Karen Baldwin.

Gov. Frank G. Clement walked into death house and commuted the sentences of five convicted murderers after the house killed a bill to abolish the death penalty by 48-47 vote; in Kentucky, where Gov. Edward T. Breathitt ordered a ban awaiting a bill before the 1966 legislature.

Massachusetts, South Dakota and New Hampshire have not executed a man in years.

Legislation to ban capital punishment is under serious debate in many other states, including Colorado, where it is in referendum, and Indiana, New Jersey, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Washington.

Yet Massachusetts, Maryland, Kansas and Missouri also recently defeated bills to end capital punishment. In Indiana Gov. Roger D. Branigan vetoed such a bill after the murder of a state trooper. And eight states — Kansas, Colorado, Washington, Arizona, Missouri, Tennessee, South Dakota and Delaware — restored the death penalty after abolishing it.

Kansas Hangings
Last month two young men, 22 and 23, who had boasted of killing seven persons, were executed — by hanging — in Kansas.

Public opinion stands divided. A 1965 Gallup poll showed 45 percent favoring retention of the death penalty, 43 percent favoring abolition.

Today there is one murder, forcible rape or assault to kill every three minutes of the day and night. Murder rates have been climbing slowly since 1958's low of 4.1, to an estimated 4.6 for 1964, but are still much lower than in the 1930's (9.6 per 100,000 in 1933).

Abolitionists term the death penalty a "brutal barbarism, unworthy of a civilized society."

Others insist that the death penalty is practical and necessary. Says FBI director J. Edgar Hoover: "The savagely mutilated bodies and ravaged victims of murderers, rapists and other criminal beasts beg consideration, when evidence is weighed on both sides of the scales of justice. We must never allow misguided compassion to erase our concern for the unfortunate, innocent victims of bestial criminals. No pleas in favor of the death penalty can be more horribly eloquent than the sight of a battered, sexually assaulted body of a child."

Moral Question

Does the death penalty help as they were in states which exact death for the murder of a policeman?

Advocates of capital punishment say these statistics prove nothing.

"We know how many people murdered, but we do not know how many did not kill, stopped by fear of their own death's one of man's greatest fears," says Richard H. Kuh, speaking for the New State Combined Council of Law Enforcement Officials.

Criminologists, psychiatrists, law enforcement officers recognize three general types of murderers: The psychologically ill; those who kill out of jealousy or sudden rage, hatred or deep, and those who murder for gain. Modern social conscience, with new concepts of insanity, tends to protect and help the psychopathic killer. And he is unlikely to be executed.

Softer Powers That Be
Today judges, lawyers and governors with power of clemency recognize that many murders of rage and passion are a two-way act: Passion begetting passion. Crime re-shed by crime. The FBI shows that 82 states without the death penalty per cent of killers had personal contact with their victims — mates, lovers, neighbors, relatives. Two-thirds of both murderers and victims had been drinking; nearly two-thirds had previous records of violence.

It is the third group which the retentionists believe may be deterred by the death penalty. Those (about 12 per cent) who murder for gain — the husband who coldly murders his wife to be free; the wife who robs her husband's insurance; the robber who kills to keep from being identified or captured. Chivalry protects the fair sex. Women kill less (last year they were charged with 33 per cent of homicides), yet fewer in proportion have been executed since 1957.

The risk of executing an innocent man worries many. Michigan, Rhode Island and Maine abolished capital punishment primarily for this reason.

Federal Regulatory Agencies "Fourth" Branch Of Government

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Constitution sets up three branches of government — legislative, executive and judicial. But there's a fourth one — the regulatory agencies — and their influence on your daily life and livelihood is tremendous.

By JULES LOH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even old James Madison, man of vision that he was, might wince today if he saw what has become of that tidy three-branch government for which he labored so passionately.

Nowhere does the Constitution mention a "fourth branch" of government, but one exists.

Not only exists, but within its control are all the powers and functions of the other three branches — legislative, executive and judicial — a circumstance Madison himself once characterized forbodingly as "the very definition of tyranny."

Nor is this fourth branch some insignificant appendage to the federal structure.

The fact is, from the moment a citizen awakens to his electric alarm clock, lights a well-adorned cigarette, brushes with a particular brand of toothpaste, shaves, eats his bacon and grade A eggs, catches the bus to his wage-earning job, phones his broker, pays his gas bill, takes an aspirin, confirms an airplane reservation, buys a specifically priced quart of milk on the way home, or a six-pack of beer, enjoys a choice steak and then settles down to watch television — nearly every routine action he takes during the day falls within the influence of one of his government's regulatory agencies.

These, the federal regulatory agencies, are the powerful fourth branch of American government.

Thirty-Three
By generally accepted count there are 33 agencies involved in "the determination of rights, privileges and obligations of private individuals through adjudication and rulemaking," the definition made by a commission set up to study them. But most of their broad influence over Americans' daily lives centers in seven agencies.

Known as the Big Seven, they are:

—The Federal Trade Commission — FTC, set up to prevent price-fixing, deceptive advertising, monopoly and other practices that hurt business competition. It is the FTC which now is demanding a health warning on cigarette packages.

—The Federal Communications Commission — FCC, which licenses radio and television stations, since the airwaves belong to everybody, and regulates all interstate and foreign communications.

—The Interstate Commerce Commission — ICC, granddaddy of all the alphabet agencies, which was set up in 1887 to regulate the railroads. It still does, as well as bus and truck lines and commercial operations on inland waterways. Right now the ICC is wrestling over proposals for huge railroad mergers.

—The Civil Aeronautics Board — CAB, which approves airline routes, fares and freight charges, authorizes subsidies and investigate accidents.

—The Federal Aviation Agency — FAA, which takes over after the takeoff. It writes flying rules, certifies pilots, inspects airplanes for safety and operates control towers. Two years ago, when the FAA celebrated its fifth anniversary, its 45,000 employees outnumbered the State Department.

—The Securities and Exchange Commission — SEC, which patrols the stock exchanges, registers new issues of stocks and bonds and generally enforces the "truth in securities" laws of the early New Deal.

—The Federal Power Commission — FPC, which licenses hydroelectric projects and interstate pipelines and controls their rates and operation.

In a 1937 report to Congress, President Franklin D. Roosevelt styled them "miniature independent governments." He also called them "a haphazard deposit of irresponsible agencies and uncoordinated powers," though more were hatched during his years in the White House than any administration before.

ONCE YOU USE LUCITE HOUSE PAINT

YOU'LL NEVER GO BACK TO "HARD WORK" PAINTS AGAIN

Once you see how "Lucite"

flows on—how it dries in minutes—how it needs no special primer—how it saves you hours of work—how fast it is to clean up with soap and water after painting—how easy it covers wood, brick, stucco, masonry, cinder block, you'll never go back to oil base paints.

And "Lucite" gives you more—more years of wear—than ordinary paints. Tests on actual houses proved it. If you use "Lucite" according to directions this year, it probably will be the last time you'll have to repaint this decade. Need we say more?

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week went through one of its wildest weeks. It suddenly swung from a severe loss to huge gains.

The turnaround forced a slide that had been in force since the averages reached their all-time peaks May 14.

As a result, one broker said, "The month of June was closed out on a note of relief and the market entered July with an air of hope."

Brokers gave a resurgence of buying by institutions most of the credit for the market's somersault. There also were indications, they said, that the small investors were leaving the sidelines and coming back into the market.

Governmental reassurances that the outlook for the economy was good seemed to have overcome some of the pessimism that had persisted for weeks. However, there was continued worry over escalation of the war in South Viet Nam.

The week started out Monday on the same sour note that had brought the Dow Jones average down 100 points in six weeks. The market was battered by a selling wave.

One broker called Tuesday's session "the most volatile I have ever seen." Prices rose sharply at the opening, fell to a loss and then rocketed back to the highest level of the day.

The gain was the biggest since Nov. 26, 1963, when trading was resumed after President Kennedy's assassination.

Volume of 10.49 million shares was the heaviest since May 31, 1962, and the sixth highest in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

Prices soared all through Wednesday's session. Again the gain was the largest since Nov. 26, 1963.

The market was expected by Wall Streeters to quiet down, and perhaps slip back, Thursday and Friday, especially Friday, the last day of trading before the three-day Fourth of July weekend. But on both days, a rally developed near the close of trading and good advances were scored.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed 20.80 to 875.16 for the week, erasing a large chunk of its loss since May 14. The Associated Press 60-stock average gained 8.3 to 321.1.

Volume soared to 33,860,195 shares from 21,844,200 the previous week. Of 1,528 issues traded, 989 advanced and 376 declined.

A hectic week on the stock market had an impact on bond prices also — both corporate and Treasury bonds registered declines.

The entire list of 40 U.S. Treasury bonds declined in price during the week. Some issues fell as much as 8-32.

The drop came despite heavy buying of Treasury bonds by the Federal Reserve System. During the week ended Wednesday, the F.R.S. purchased its biggest weekly volume of bonds this year, $191.95 million. That put its total holdings of bonds at $3.38 billion.

A factor of possible future concern for investors was the $350 million gold loss during the past week, the largest in six years.

On the New York Stock Exchange bond volume totaled a par value of $75.24 million, the highest level in many months. Volume was $41.6 million the previous week.

Chicago Livestock Market Report

CHICAGO (AP)—This week's butcher hog supply was the smallest of the year but the market trended mostly toward weakness with the top $25 a hundredweight in late trading compared with a peak of $26 on three days last week.

The supply of 22,000 head compared with 23,500 last week and 27,000 two weeks ago.

A decline of as much as 50 cents a hundredweight for the week was the second in two weeks and it dropped the average price to $24.30 compared with $24.90 last week. However, it still was more than $6 above a year ago.

The market for slaughter steers started higher on Monday but increased offerings on Wednesday wiped out the gain. For the week, prices were steady to 25 cents lower. The market for carcasses also weakened.

The average price was estimated at slightly less than the $27.50 of the previous week. A year ago it was $22.72.

Demand was slow for spring slaughter lambs throughout the week and they closed mostly $1 lower.

Son-In-Law Of Syndicate Boss Resigns

CHICAGO (AP)—Anthony P. Tisci, son-in-law of Momo Salvatore Giancana, reputed head of the Chicago crime syndicate, has resigned his $19,000 a year job as secretary to Rep. Frank Annunzio, Illinois Democrat.

Annunzio disclosed the resignation and said Tisci gave ill health as his reason for quitting Friday the post Tisci held under Annunzio and his predecessor, former Rep. Roland Libonati, D-Ill., who retired in 1963.

Tisci, a lawyer, recently appeared before a federal grand jury in Chicago that is looking into organized crime in Illinois. He disclosed on June 25 that he had invoked his constitutional rights against self incrimination during three appearances before the jury.

Federal prosecutors indicated Tisci may be recalled for still another round of questioning.

Giancana was jailed June 1 for refusal to answer the grand jury's questions after he had been granted immunity from prosecution.

Judge William J. Campbell of U.S. District Court ordered Giancana jailed until he agrees to answer questions put to him or until the jury's term expires next year.

Annunzio said Tisci's letter of resignation stated he was quitting as manager of the congressman's Chicago office under a doctor's orders because of a heart ailment. Tisci said he planned to limit his activities to the practice of law.

Annunzio said he accepted the resignation "immediately and with regret."

The resignation came only a day after Annunzio had announced that Tisci would not be fired from his job as a result of his defiance of the grand jury.

Tisci, 36, and Giancana's daughter, Bonnie Lou, 25, were married in Miami, Fla., in 1959.

Torre, Mays Only Repeaters For NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Repeaters Willie Mays and Joe Torre topped the National League All-Star team named Saturday that included such power hitters as Henry Aaron, Ernie Banks, Richie Allen and Willie Stargell.

Fleet-footed Maury Wills and Pete Rose round out the starting team, exclusive of the pitcher, that will face the American League's best in the 36th All-Star game in Minnesota July 13. An indication of the strength of the NL line-up is the fact that it had not room for such as Roberto Clemente, Frank Robinson, Bill White and Curt Flood.

Mays, the brilliant San Francisco center fielder, won his position in a breeze. He captured 250 votes out of a possible 255. It was the 12th straight year he'd been named to the starting lineup. Cincinnati's Vada Pinson, the runner-up, received only 17 votes, all from the Giants who could not vote for their own man.

Torre also was a huge vote-getter. The stocky Milwaukee catcher got 246 votes to only 24 for runner-up John Edwards of Cincinnati.

Torre and Mays were the only repeaters from last year's team, which included first baseman Orlando Cepeda, second baseman Ron Hunt, third baseman Ken Boyer, shortstop Dick Groat and outfielders Billy Williams and Clemente.

Of these, only Williams was able to make the second team this year. The Chicago Cubs' left fielder drew 61 votes to 194 for Pittsburgh's Stargell.

The only close race was for second base where Rose, Cincinnati's aggressive leadoff hitter, edged out veteran Frank Bolling of the Braves, 110 votes to 100.

On the surface, the Nationals appeared to have a much stronger starting team than the Americans, who have Bill Skowron at first base, Felix Mantilla at second, Brooks Robinson at third, Dick McAuliffe at short, Willie Horton in left, Vic Davalillo in center, Rocky Colavito in right and Earl Battey behind the plate.

Commissioner Ford Frick, whose office conducted the polls from among the 562 players, coaches and managers in the two leagues, said the alternates and pitchers will be named next week.

Journal Sports COURIER

By BUFORD GREEN
Response to date for the Jacksonville City Championship Tennis Tournament has been encouraging, and indications are that revival of this once annual event in Jacksonville will again see good competitive tennis.

Entries started coming in the day after the announcement appeared in the JOURNAL COURIER, sponsors of the tournament.

—O—
Tournament Director Don Houser plans to run the Junior Division (under 16) off the week of July 12-July 17, with the men's and women's singles championship matches the final day.

The Senior Division (16 and over) will be held on consecutive weekends, because of probable work conflicts with the older set.

—O—
Only the men's Senior class will have doubles, as it was felt that there would not be sufficient interest in doubles in the Senior women's and the Junior group.

All championship matches will probably be held on the new MacMurray courts, made of a softer asphalt material called Laykold.

—O—
All interested entrants are urged to get their entries in as soon as possible. The deadline for Juniors is midnight July 9, and July 14 for the Seniors.

Pairings in the Junior class will strictly be draw, while the Senior pairings will be set up as close as possible to experience and ability.

—O—
Baseball fans: A good holiday treat in the area is the 5th annual Riverton Tournament in Riverton July 4-5, with eight teams entered.

Teams entered include four from the Little Eight League, and others from as far away as St. Louis, a team composed of promising college players being tutored by the Houston Astros organization.

—O—
With no league games on tap today, the Jacksonville City Power team will play an exhibition game at Florence today at 2 p.m.

Following this open date City Power has five straight double-headers coming up, starting with two at Nichols Park next Sunday against defending champ and currently undefeated Riverton.

Little League

Jim Long's single scored Larry Stewart from third with the winning run as the Red Sox nipped the Tigers, 7-6, while the Braves ripped the Cubs, 12-3, in Little League play Saturday evening.

The Red Sox grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first, but the eventual losers came on with a pair in the third and two more in the fourth to forge ahead.

Two in the fourth and a single tally in the fifth gave the Red Sox a 6-4 edge, but the Tigers again rallied to tie in the sixth, before the Sox pulled it out in the home half of the final frame.

Larry Stewart and Tom Newbold slugged roundtrippers for the winners, while Tim Olson poled a homer for the losers.

The Braves were never in trouble after taking a 3-2 edge in the opening round. The lead reached 12-2 by the fourth. Leland Wilson had a homer and a double for the winners.

Mann Soars Four Strokes On Top In Women's Open

NORTHFIELD, N. J. (AP) — Six-foot-three Carol Mann, wheezing and gulping pills because of a severe chest cold, shot a two-under-par for 218 Saturday and soared into a four-stroke lead in the third round of the Women's National Open Golf Championship.

Mrs. Kathy Cornelius, the 32-year-old golfing mother from Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., the leader through the first two rounds, saw her putting touch become as chilled as the windy gusts off the bay. She faded to a 77 for 223, leaving her five shots back.

Closest to the statuesque Miss Mann, a 24-year-old pro from Towson, Md., were 20-year-old Judy Torluemke of North Key Largo, Fla., and Mary Mills of Handsboro, Miss., tied at 222.

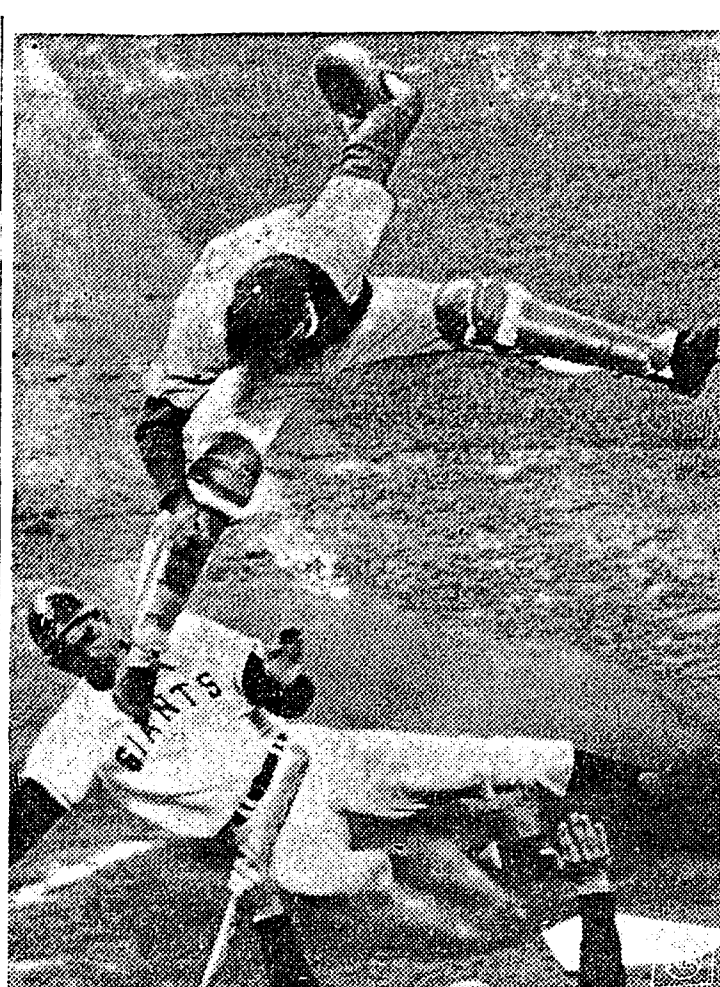

Miss Mills, the 1963 winner of this event, matched Miss Mann's 70 over the wind-whipped, 6,200-yard, par-72 Atlantic City Country Club course while the 105-pound Miss Torluemke shot a 72.

Tied with Mrs. Cornelius at 223 was Marilyn Smith of Jupiter, Fla., with a 74 for 223. One stroke behind them at 224 were Louise Suggs and Ruth Jessen, each with 71.

The Gooney-Bird Is Candidate For Hall Of Fame Or Kook Klub

(Last of a series)
By TOM TIEDE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Unlike some of the storied hell-raisers of baseball — the Ruths and Cobbs who rode roughshod with bat and bottle — most of today's Kook Klub aren't really good enough to be bad.

The exception may be Don Larsen — a legitimate legend of our time in more ways than one. He is, at once, one of the most famous winners and infamous losers in all of baseball history.

He magnificently perfect game for New York in the 1956 World Series, however, will probably live longer in the memory of man than, say, the 21 losses with Baltimore two seasons previous.

And again probably, the series performance will also outlive his conquest and defeats off the field. For as the fabled players of yore, from whose mold he came, Larsen is no stranger to strong living.

His pitching, in fact, was never as fast as his partying. And if he holds a special page in the sports record book, he also holds one in the New York statutes. He's the only player to ever pitch a perfect game in the World Series and be slapped with a separation suit the same week.

Larsen's elevator career in professional sport probably would be funny were it not touching on the tragic. He has played on nine different major league teams in 14 years. He was 11-5 the year of the no-hitter but hasn't equaled it since — dropping as low as 1-10 at Kansas City in 1960.

Gooney-bird, as he's sometimes called for reasons that are physically obvious, is now 35. The wins are running out. So are the teams. He's back full cycle with Baltimore.

But if he isn't the pitcher he once was, neither is he the playboy. Married again, since 1958, he lives quietly in California.

And fading or no, the legend lives. In Baltimore, San Francisco, Houston or wherever he hangs his hat, when the big guy takes the mound, all eyes are on him and everybody remembers when . . .

At least until the first hit.

No Longer A Dominate Golf Name

ST. LOUIS — (NEA) — Gary Player of Johannesburg, South Africa, won the United States Open while Arnold Palmer watched on a television set at home in Ligonier, Pa.

And a wry smile spread over Jack Nicklaus' midwestern face as he blushed, "I broke 300." At the same time, Kel Nagle of Sydney, Australia, who's old enough to be Jack's father, had just taken Player into an all-foreign playoff for the Open. He was 17 strokes up on Nicklaus.

"Golf," said Fred Corcoran, as he rushed to the airport, "is a world game."

Corcoran is the golf promoter who pushes the Canada Cup matches, involving 34 countries, and has also been twice manager of the American team in its Ryder Cup matches with Great Britain.

"Palmer, Nicklaus and Tony Lema can't win all the time," said Corcoran. "From here on, there's going to be no standouts. There are 10 good players all the time, but no one will dominate."

That's the significance of the foreign breakthrough in the Open, with a couple of guys from the other side of the world getting their only serious challenge from a 26-year-old Louisville youngster, Frank Beard, before they took over the show themselves.

Lema, whose only prestige win has been the British Open, commented, "Every time you tee off, there's a potential winner whose name you don't even know."

To the golfers of the world, Nagle isn't exactly an unknown since he first came on the international scene in 1951. But only the connoisseurs would be aware of the fact that he and Peter Thomson once beat Sam Snead and Jimmy Demaret back in 1954 to win the Canada Cup matches. And in 1960 he won the British Open with Palmer on his heels, which, as Corcoran says, "is a helluva trick."

The 44-year-old veteran's presence in the challenging echelon was the drama of this year's open. He even won over the galleries with a prosaic game that fits his tea-and-biscuits personality.

Kelvin's a nice man without the dynamic flair of Player, the little gimmick man who once had trousers tailored with one leg white and the other leg black, and shoes to match.

Player's ultimate victory preserved the illusion that the Big Three — lawyer Mark McCormick's stable of Nicklaus, Palmer and Gary — still dominates the pro circuit. But McCormick's always defensive about Player's inclusion.

And there has to be a change of thinking about Gung Ho golf — attacking with booming, muscular drives and irons — being the only way to play the game.

Bellerive, the longest Open course in history, became a setup for the short, control hitters like Nagle because they've been trained to stay out of trouble. Player, who tries to match muscle with the Nicklaus-Palmer school, led the pack most of the way because essentially he thrives on conservative play.

Player and Nagle were trained on the courses of the world, where straying from the fairway means thick patches of gorse and bramble instead of friendly rough.

"It teaches you to be conservative to play in England, for instance," admitted Nagle, "because you've got to be on the fairway. At St. Andrews in Scotland, there's a plaque to mark the spot where Palmer once blasted out of some gorse onto a green."

They're also trained to use more than a driver and a wedge to the green. "Player and Nagle were up there," said Dan Sikes, one of the younger America's better players, "because they're great four-wood players. It gives them better control than a long iron."

"It's probably," said Nagle with a bashful smile, "because I've got to play them more often than the other fellows."

It wasn't like he was apologizing.

SOVIETS DOMINATE GAMES FOR DEAF

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 10th International Games for the Deaf ended Saturday as they began, with the Soviet Union scooping up gold medals.

The Russians walked off with three gold medals to one for the United States, and produced their second triple gold medal winner, walker Victor Demanov.

Demanov completed a sweep of the walking events by winning the 20,000-meter walk, just as Alexandre Boitsov earlier won the three long distance runs.

The Soviet Union wound up with 20 gold medals, 10 silver and 10 bronze.

Fairfield Moves Within Two Strokes Of Western Lead

CHICAGO (AP) — Two victory-hungry pros, Al Geiberger and Jack McGowan, headed a par-busting stampede Saturday to share the 54-hole lead of the $70,000 Western Open golf tournament.

The 27-year-old Geiberger of Carlton Oaks, Calif., winner of the Ontario Open in 1962 and the Almaden Open in 1963 in his home state, shot a 35-34—69 over the par 36-35—71 Tam O'Shanter course for a 204 total.

Also at 204, nine under par, was the 142-pound McGowan, of Largo, Fla., whose only triumph in four years on the PGA tour was the Mountain View Open in Corona, Calif., last October.

The 34-year-old McGowan had the lowest round of the day, 33-32—65, with seven birdies, three of them on the final four holes. He started his round with a bogey five after his second shot sailed out of bounds, recovering with a 50-foot putt.

Two strokes behind the front runners at 206 were six players, including Jim Wiechers, 20-year-old Santa Clara junior who won the Western Junior last year, the USGA junior in 1962 and was runner-up in the NCAA

One prominent pro football coach, after watching the most expensive college quarterback crop in history at the All-American game in Buffalo, said there wasn't one there he could get excited about. And that if you left out Joe Namath, this year's rookie quarterbacks couldn't match the '64 bunch.

The Harris crash survey of Atlanta sports interests, made at the behest of the NFL, has one gross omission. The people there are bugs about stock car racing.

Among the stops for the NBA all-star team on its recent world jaunt was Lebanon. When they got there, the players slyly asked coach Dolph Schayes, who's Jewish: "Mind walking three or four steps to the right . . . so we'll be out of the line of fire?"

When Haskell Cohen recruited Paul Dietzel for the eighth annual coaches' clinic (attended by 500) at Kutscher's in the Catskills, he asked the Army football coach to suggest three possible topics for his lecture. Dietzel fired back: 1) morale and its importance in winning; 2) the organization of football practice sessions; 3) defense against Kutscher's food, and the quantity thereof.

Between you'n'me, it gives you a start to walk into the Los Angeles Angels' dressing room before a game. They're all swathed in Green Bay Packer T-shirts. Their equipment manager doubles for the Packers during the fall. . . .

The team picked by Dean Chance to win the American League pennant is the Chicago White Sox. "With," he added, "the Cleveland Indians as the dark horse." The handsome right-hander of the LA Angels shows a big gap on the left side of his mouth where the wisdom tooth used to be that infected his system and has held him back from his Cy Young Award form of '64. "Funny thing," noted Dean, "is that I didn't even have a toothache at any time."

Phil Linz, the Yankees' super-sub, is opening a bistro on the posh East Side in September and looking for a caricaturist to amuse the expected customers. . . .

Now if you want a way of life, check with Doug Sanders, the peripatetic playboy of the links. He owns a house in Denver, an apartment in Dallas, a pad in Ojai, Calif., and still calls Cedarhurst, Ga., home. He keeps six sets of suits in six different locations around the country, moving them around as he goes in and out. "That's because I'm different than other golfers," says Doug, explaining his nomadic existence. "I like people."

Beardstown Sports Great Is Honored

By VIRGIL REITHER
BEARDSTOWN — No name shines more brightly in Beardstown sports history than Baujan, and many members of the family have been outstanding athletes.

But it remained for Harry C. Baujan to win the greatest fame not only as a player but also as a coach, and his long and honorable career in athletics at Dayton University has recently been recognized with a testimonial dinner at which he was eulogized as the Knute Rockne of Dayton.

The dinner at the Sheraton-Dayton hotel in Dayton was attended by 600 persons, including prominent sportsmen, hundreds of Baujan's "boys," and Cecil and Paul Baujan of Beardstown.

The honored guest, now 71 years old, received many gifts, plaques, and memorials including more than $3,000 and "a new car every year" for his retirement days.

Born in Beardstown, Harry C. attended grade school here and took one year at Beardstown High after which he "prepped" at Notre Dame, graduating from the high school in 1913 and from Notre Dame University in 1917. He ranked in the top third of his class scholastically and played football for Knute Rockne so well that he was named All Western and All Indiana end for three years.

Enters Service
After getting his Notre Dame degree (a month in advance) Baujan enlisted, went to Officers Training School, became a second lieutenant and spent two years in service, more than a year in France. In his address at the testimonial dinner Baujan was to reveal that he had been saved from death during World War one and on at least a half dozen other occasions God's "special mission" to work with young men as he had done for 42 years at Dayton.

Professional football was just becoming popular after WW II, and Baujan got into the game as a pro in Massillon, and in Cleveland, but those were not the days of the big money player.

He began his career as a coach in 1923 at Dayton, became head coach in 1923 and held the position until 1946, winning 64 games, losing 64 and tying 8. Among the thousands of boys he coached was a Beardstownian, Edwin Yagow, who played for Dayton and went on to success in the business world.

Record At Dayton
From 1924 to 1952 Baujan also was head basketball coach at Dayton winning 446 games and losing 38. He was director of athletics at Dayton from 1947 to 1964, and his activities in sports would provide data for a voluminous volume; this included Consultant for the Athletic Program at Dayton, Athletic Director of the Year, Knute Rockne of America Club, named to Helms Athletic Club football Hall of Fame as player, coach and athletic director.

He was nominated to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1963. His community service in Dayton included work in many service groups including the Polio Foundation, Amateur Baseball Commission etc.

In 1961 the University of Dayton Stadium was renamed Baujan Field. In spite of this and all the work he did in education, however, he never was able to teach Daytonians the correct pronunciation of his name.

In Dayton the name is pronounced as though it were spelled BOW JOHN. But the Beardstown pronunciation is BOO YAN.

Baujan has two sons. Jerry who played football for his father and is now a medical doctor with his own clinic in Dayton, and David, 16, who still is in high school in Dayton, but who will attend Dayton University on a scholarship awarded the night of the Testimonial Dinner.

Big Names Attend
Among the big names attending the dinner was Jim Conzelmann, who was the master of ceremonies. Don Peden, retired Ohio University coach, Don Miller, one of the immortal Four Horsemen.

The affair was described as an emotion packed gathering in which Baujan responded to toasts "with elegant simplicity, warm, dignity and a humble heart."

"As I stand here on the podium," he said, "I could cry. I could laugh, I could shout with joy. For no person, however, great or important, could have, or has experienced a greater thrill."

"It has always been my belief that God put every individual on this earth to carry out a mission."

"I believe God guided me through my high school days, World War I, and placed me at the University of Dayton to help develop young men into good citizens. This evidently was my mission."

Baujan's father was intensely sports-minded and promoted many teams in Beardstown with his money and then contributed the talents of his sons Harry, Cecil and Otto also. Harry and Cecil were the performers afield while Otto took care of details like finances, ticket taking etc.

Harry came home during the summers for a few weeks, during which he displaced his brother Cecil at Third Base for the local semi-pros. Cecil then shifted to second base. Cecil starred in all sports in high school here, and had wide fame as a semi-pro quarterback with Beardstown's Independents. He has two sons — Jack was a good athlete in high school here and Paul gives promise of being outstanding in all sports during his remaining three years in high school.

La Cima Claims Saranac Trial, Hail To All 3rd

NEW YORK (AP) — Hail To All, winner of the Belmont Stakes and Jersey Derby, found the one mile of the $56,400 Saranac Handicap too short for his patented stretch charge Saturday and wound up third as La Cima hit the finish line in the sizzling time of 1:34.2-5.

La Cima, carrying the silks of Texas Joseph R. Straus, took the lead less than one-eighth of a mile from home and won by three quarters of a length over George D. Widener's Eurasian under Dobby Ussery's lashing whip.

Hail To All, carrying the hopes of Mrs. Ben Cohen of Baltimore, apparently didn't have a chance when the field of seven 3-year-olds reached the home stretch, one-quarter-mile from the finish line.

He had been last all the way and still was a good 10 lengths back when jockey Johnny Sellers gave him the word. He rapidly ate up the ground but his bid fell short. He was three-quarters of a length back of Eurasian at the end. Pass The Word was fourth, Duc De Great fifth, First Family sixth and Joe Goose last.

With the bulk of the wagering going for Hail To All and First Family, La Cima paid his backers in the crowd of 47,104, $11.30, $6 and $3.10.

Eurasian, ridden by Johnny Ruane, returned $.90 and $5.50 while Hail To All, picking up $5,640 to run his 1965 bankroll to $292,947, paid $2.50 to show.

Allen, Thomas Exchange Blows Before Gametime

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — First baseman Frank Thomas of the Philadelphia Phillies, involved in a pre-game fight with All-Star third baseman Rich Allen, was placed on waivers "for the best interest of the club" immediately after Saturday night's game against Cincinnati.

Thomas, who swung a bat at Allen during the pre-game scuffle, was used as a pinch hitter during the game and hit a pinch-hit homer in the eighth inning, pulling the Phillies into an 8-3 tie. The Phillies, however, went on to lose the game 10-8.

The Phillies termed the waivers "irrevocable," meaning they could not be withdrawn. Thomas was removed from the Phillies roster immediately and can now be claimed by any National League club.

Allen and Thomas exchanged blows at Connie Mack Stadium about two hours before game time. After a heated exchange of words, Allen punched Thomas in the mouth and Thomas swung back with a bat and hit Allen a glancing blow on the shoulder.

Teammates quickly broke up the fight and hustled the two players off to the dugout.

Both were back for batting practice.

Allen, who is leading the National League in batting with a .335 average, was named Saturday as a starter in the All-Star game. Thomas has not been in the Phillies line-up for weeks.

Phillies Manager Gene Mauch said afterwards that "it is the sort of thing that could happen to any two people in any business, but unfortunately they're professional ballplayers and it will be brought to everybody's attention."

The incident occurred about two hours before game time, in front of the batting cage.

There were hundreds of fans streaming into the stands at the time.

According to some onlookers, the fracas started with some needless remarks exchanged by Allen and Thomas.

The entire incident lasted just a few minutes.

5 Point Leaders In USAC Race At Fairgrounds

STATE FAIRGROUNDS, Springfield — State Fair officials said today they were assured that the first five-point leaders in the current race for the United States Auto Club Stock championship would compete in the 100-mile Stock Car race at the fair Friday, Aug. 20. The race for late model autos is the first ever held during the state exposition. Other such races have always been staged following the fair.

Norm Nelson, Racine, Wis., veteran stock car pilot, is far in front in the 1965 race. It appears that Nelson, like wine, improves with age, for he is celebrating his 25th year behind the wheel of a race car. In the four USAC Stock Car events this season, Norm has won two in his speedy 1965 Plymouth. He has chalked up a total of 1,232 points to hold a 242-point advantage over Paul Goldsmith of St. Clair Shores, Mich.

Don White, a former USAC Stock Car champion from Keokuk, Iowa, is third with 785 points. Nelson's teammate, Jim Hurtubise, North Tonawanda, N. Y., a popular big car pilot, is in fifth spot, only four points back of Herb Shannon, the fine driver from Perrin. Shannon has 494 to Hurtubise's 490.

All five drivers will be in action at Springfield the afternoon of Aug. 20.

Two new drivers have joined USAC and scored well. They are Bobby Isaacs, who recently won the Schererville, Ind., stock car race, and Dave Pearson. Both are former drivers for National Association for Stock Car Racing (NASCAR).

The Envoys Wore Short Pants

By SANDY PADWE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
NEW YORK (NEA) — It had been an impressive briefing with State Department representatives cramming the National Basketball Association players full of facts, figures and the importance of being good will ambassadors.

"Now," said one of the State Department men, "do any of you have any questions — about anything?"

Silence for a moment.

Then Bailey Howell uncured his 6-foot-8-frame and in that slow Middleton, Tenn., drawl politely inquired:

"Where's the best place to find cuckoo clocks?"

With that the NBA All-Stars' month-long tour of Europe (25 cities) was launched — a tour that's going to be remembered for a long time, on both sides of the Atlantic.

Wayne Embury of the Cincinnati Royals was the first victim of the language barrier.

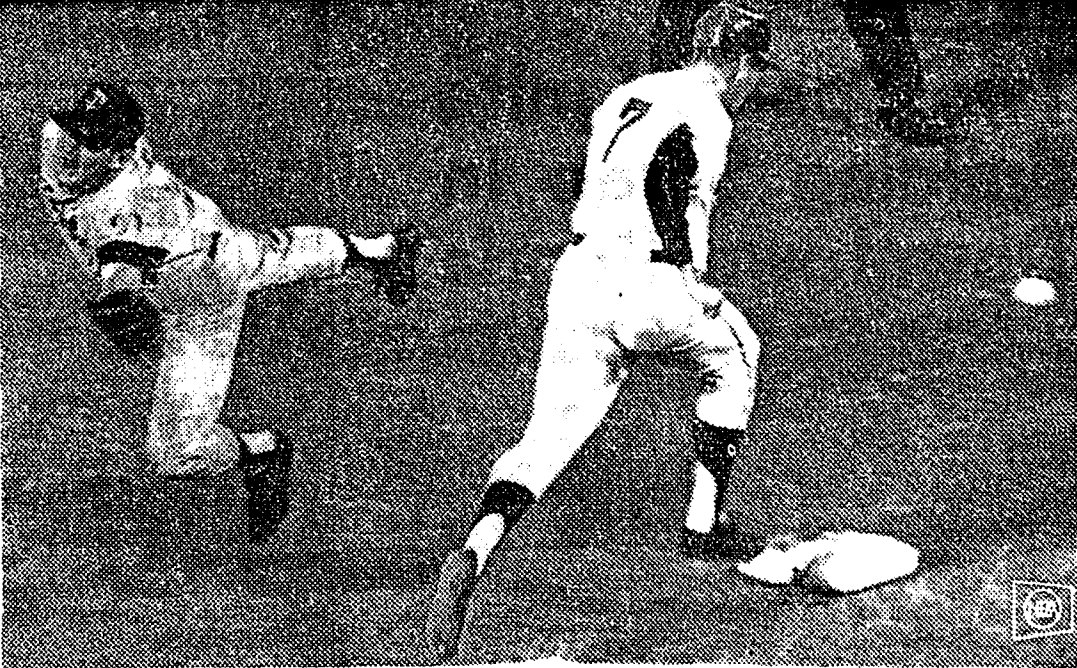

He lost his suitcase in an airport mix-up in Bulgaria and had to exist the rest of the trip on hand-me-downs from Nate Thurmond of the San Francisco Warriors.

"I didn't mind too much," Embury said. "Of course, I had to do a lot of washing every night. But that wasn't the worst of it. You should have seen the beds. They weren't exactly the kind some of us are used to."

Embury is 6-8 and weighs 250 pounds. Thurmond is 6-11, 225.

"In one place," Embury said, "the bed had such a sag that I figured if I moved an inch it would collapse with me in the middle."

"Ordering food was pretty much of a chance, too. They'd always give you one of those big menus and you'd open it and laugh. You couldn't even begin to read it."

NICE TRY—Minnesota Twins first baseman Don Mincher makes a valiant effort here, but it's not quite good enough. The ball, extreme right, went sailing by and Los Angeles Angel Bob Rodgers went on to second. (NEA Telephoto)

Cubs Defeat Part-Time Golf Pro At Peace With Self

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball's empty homers by Billy Williams and Ed Bailey backed Larry Jackson's five-hit pitching in a 4-1 Chicago victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Jackson, posting his sixth triumph against 10 defeats, allowed only a home run by Willie McCovey in the seventh inning. The blow was McCovey's 17th.

Loser Bob Shaw, 7-6, yielded a first-inning homer to Williams and Bailey's fifth-inning homer before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

Don Landrum got three of the Cubs' nine hits, including two singles off Shaw and a double off reliever Masanori Murakami.

After Landrum's double, Murakami walked Williams and was replaced by Frank Linzy. Ernie Banks stroked a two-out single, driving across Landrum and Williams after they worked a double steal on Linzy.

San Francisco 000 000 100—1 5 0 Chicago 100 010 024—4 9 0 Shaw, Murakami (8), Linzy (8), Henry (8) and Haller; Jackson and Bailey, W—Jackson (6-10), L—Shaw (7-6).

NICKLAUS, PALMER BRITISH FAVORITES
SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Britain's legal bookies ignored the recent sorry showing of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer in the United States Open and installed the two long-hitting Americans as the favorites for the British Open Golf Crown.

Nicklaus, who needs only the British title to become the fourth man in history to complete a career sweep of the world's four major titles, was made a 7-2 choice. Palmer was second at 5-1.

Defending champion Tony Lema was third at 6-1. South African Gary Player, U.S. Open champion, was next at 8-1 on the bookies' early line for the tourney that runs Wednesday through Friday on the Royal Birkdale course.

In Beirut a dinner was thrown by the Lebanese Basketball Federation in honor of the Americans.

It consisted of 42 different courses.

In the middle of the table was a big silver-covered dish which caught the attention of Hal Greer of the Philadelphia 76ers.

"What's in it?" Greer asked. One of his smiling hosts uncovered a sheep's leg dipped in blood.

Greer, one of the fastest backcourt men in the NBA, looked even faster on the way to the men's room.

At the airport in Bucharest, Romania, the boys ganged up on Bill Bates, the 76ers' trainer who doubled as a player during the trip.

"We figured we'd play a trick on Bates," Embury said. "He's the most excitable guy anyway."

"So we got this guard (who was wearing a gun) to go up to him just before we were ready to board the plane and tell him he couldn't leave the country."

"That was some sight. There's Bill with those big horn-rimmed glasses, trying to make sense of what the guy is saying and screaming, 'What do you mean I can't leave the country? What have I done?'"

"This went on for about 10 minutes before the guy finally broke up and Bill realized it was a joke."

Some joke.

BILL GEORGE INKS PACT
CHICAGO (AP) — Linebacker Bill George spiked the perennial rumor of retirement Saturday and signed for a record 14th season with the Chicago Bears.

He will have the longest playing tenure in Bear history, topping the 13-year hitch by George Trafton from 1920 through 1932.

McLain Pitches Detroit To 1-0 Margin In Five

WASHINGTON (AP) — Denny McLain allowed only one hit — Don Lock's single in the third — as Detroit edged Washington 1-0 Saturday in a game called after five innings because of rain.

A torrential downpour hit D.C. Stadium almost without warning just after the fifth inning ended.

The victory for McLain was his first straight and brought his record to 6-3. He retired the first six men before Lock led off the third with a single to right field. He then retired the last nine batters.

The Tigers scored an unearned run off Pete Richert in the third inning. Ray Oyler opened with a single to left.

Oyler scored on George Thomas' sacrifice fly to Jim King in right.

Redlegs Beaten In Tourney, 8-0, On One-Hitter

DECATUR — Decatur Riley's hurler Bob Thornton hurled a near one-hitter at the Jacksonville State Hospital Redlegs, here Saturday afternoon, in an 8-0 shutout over the defending state champs in the 12-team double-elimination Decatur Tournament.

The Redlegs will not play in the loser's bracket at 9 a.m. today against Decatur Chrysler, which lost to Bloomington, 1-0.

The only hit the Redlegs managed off Thornton was a lead-off single by Gordon McFarland in the seventh. Thornton struck out 13 and walked four.

Decatur garnered nine hits off three Jacksonville pitchers, while the team committed five errors in the field.

CHAMPAIGN WOMAN TAKES NET TITLE
LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Mary Slaughter of Champaign captured the Illinois State Women's tennis championship Saturday.

Miss Slaughter, a native of Virginia who had never played in an Illinois tennis tournament before, wore down Gertrude Kornfeld, a University of Chicago physics instructor, 6-1, 6-0, in the finals.

Because of her teaching chores at the University of Illinois, Miss Slaughter could play only every other day. So she teamed with Pan Brown of the Onwentsia club to defeat Helen Shockley and Marion Baird in the doubles, semi-finals, 6-1, 6-2.

Koufax Records 3-1 Win For 14th Victory Of Year

AD—KAUFAX
HOUSTON (AP) — Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers checked Houston 3-1 on five hits Saturday night, winning his eighth straight game and becoming the first 14-game winner in the majors.

Koufax, who has lost three games and has not been beaten since May 26, struck out 10 and had difficulty only with Joe Morgan. Morgan slammed three hits, including an eighth inning homer that broke up Koufax' shutout bid.

Larry Dierker, the 18-year-old Astros' right-hander, was the loser, yielding five hits and three runs in his 3-2 innings of work.

Maury Wills' 49th stolen base led to the first Dodger run in the third. Wills, on base after a forceout, stole second and came home on Willie Davis' single.

Robinson Single Provides Reds With 10-8 Margin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frank Robinson's two-out single in the ninth inning, his third hit, drove in Tommy Harper with the tie-breaking run as the Cincinnati Reds beat Philadelphia 10-8 Saturday night and ended the Phillies' winning streak at six games.

Harper led off the ninth with a sacrifice. Robinson, who earlier drove in three runs with his 16th homer and a single, then slapped a single to left for the run that broke an 8-8 tie.

Deron Johnson singled home another run for the Reds, who ended a three-game losing streak.

The Phillies had pulled into the tie in the eighth inning when Frank Thomas, who was involved in a pre-game fist fight with teammate Rich Allen, hit a pinch-hit homer with the bases empty. Allen drove in four runs for the Phillies with two triples and a single.

So he's now pro at Pleasant Valley Country Club (site of this year's $200,000 Carling World), which is near Sutton, which is near Worcester, which is near the boyhood home his parents have since paid the debts on. His biggest worry these days isn't how his game is going but how someone else's is. Says he:

"I get a kick out of teaching people this game. Some guys like to watch the stock market progress. I prefer watching a golf student progress. It's time compared to the tour, but then I'm sleeping nights now, too."

Guy on the tour don't sleep at night?

"Many don't. It affects people differently. It has attacked Ken Venturi physically, for instance. Nobody can find anything wrong with his hands, yet they're swollen and misshapen. It's nerves. You get the shakes on the tour."

Did you?

"I can remember situations so tense that I'd stand over my ball, look down, and not be able to see it. My mind would blank out completely."

And now?

"Actually, there is at least as much pressure on me today. I can't sustain a peak game while playing as seldom as I do. But at least I don't feel the pressure week in and week out. If I want, I can come back here to the club and just sit around watching people drive balls into the water ponds."

"Which reminds me. If you'll excuse me, I have an appointment."

A golf date?

"No, I'm going home to help the wife with the dishes."

Aussie's Smith Wins Back Title At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Margaret Smith, the 23-year-old Australian amazon, won back the Wimbledon singles crown from Maria Bueno, the Brazilian titleholder, Saturday in 55 minutes of vintage tennis, 6-4, 7-5.

It was a performance similar to last year's final, in which Maria snatched the title from Margaret in a thrill-packed drama of jittery nerves.

Miss Smith reputedly suffers badly from center court nerves, but she showed no sign of them as she coolly and competently pressed home the advantage her superior physique gave her.

The women's victory gave the Australians their first sweep over both singles titles. Roy Emerson crushed Fred Stolle in three straight sets Friday in a clash of Australian Davis Cup teammates.

In addition, the Aussies made a cleanup of four of the five championships, adding the men's doubles and mixed doubles trophies to their bag.

The only title to elude the Australians was the women's doubles, won by Miss Bueno and Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif. They trounced the French pair of Francoise Durr and Janine Lieffrig, 6-2, 7-5.

Miss Bueno's service and Billie Jean's net play featured the triumph.

New Director—

Randolph Returns To Inspect Prison Where He Started

By DICK EMERY

SPRINGFIELD — Ross Randolph returned to Pontiac Penitentiary last week to visit the institution he headed 12 years ago. He is again in charge of the prison, in fact, he is now in charge of all the prisons in Illinois.

As the newly appointed director of public safety, Randolph is responsible for the management of the Illinois penal system, as well as the parole board, the state police, the fire marshals, and the boiler inspectors.

Randolph was warden at Pontiac in 1952 and 1953 before going to riot-torn Menard Penitentiary where he served until his appointment as director June 1.

At 58, Randolph has combined education and law enforcement into a long and productive career.

These two vocations are more closely related than they might appear. And Randolph is putting this winning combination to work in his new approach to improving the state's penal system.

"I hope to build up the image of correctional institutions of Illinois as the leading system in the nation," Randolph said. "I'm serious about this mission, and I am going to need a lot of help."

"I have confidence in all my wardens and plan no changes there. My hope is to be able to help them run better institutions."

He expressed deep concern over the high turnover rate of prison guards, which runs as much as 300 per cent in some institutions.

"I'm going to find out the real cause," Randolph said. "Then effect some positive changes in the way of better training programs."

He's also checking into disciplinary action taken against some prison personnel. "I've had complaints that employees felt they were given excessive days off for rule infractions."

"I want the guards to have a better sense of security. I want to raise their morale without letting down any in discipline. Dissatisfaction and low morale are reflected in the attitudes of the inmates. I want a better relationship with less fear between the inmates and the guards," he said.

It is often said that a warden studies the inmates eight hours a day, but they spend 24 hours trying to figure him out. "They have a 3-to-1 advantage," Randolph observed. "The inmates are never fooled by superficial interest. The wardens must have genuine concern for their inmates' welfare. The inmates will sense this and it will be reflected in their attitude toward both the guards and prison officials," he noted.

Randolph is placing a lot of emphasis on education as one of the best means of rehabilitating prisoners.

Education behind prison walls is not new. Menard has had such a program for seven years and has granted high school diplomas to more than 700 inmates.

Inmates can also get high school diplomas at Dwight and at Stateville. And Randolph wants to expand this school program to all the other institutions.

"There is a direct relationship between the school dropout problem and the penitentiary population," Randolph pointed out. "At Menard, 80 per cent of the inmates are school dropouts." So if we can educate them before we send them out, they'll be much better equipped socially and vocationally.

Simple rewards are sufficient for all Randolph's efforts. He told of a fellow who wrote him a thank you note recently. "He told me how grateful he was for my help in improving his education while he was at Menard. When he came there, he couldn't even write his name."

It's Catching—

Two Sparks Ignite Building Spree In Downtown Peoria

Following World War II, downtown Peoria began to suffer as businesses sprang up in the suburbs — a plight common to many large cities.

When Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced that it would move from the center of the city to the suburbs, it appeared that the trend to the suburbs might accelerate. Business leaders realized the downtown could become a blighted area. Some 20 of them got together.

This group of 20 set out to decide what was needed to spark a revival of the center of the city. Retention of Sears was obvious. They also determined to replace their decrepit county courthouse.

Ignoring other matters, for the time being, they concentrated their efforts on these two projects. To keep Sears, a corporation was formed to raise equity capital, buy land, and put up a new building for Sears to rent.

To get a new county courthouse, the businessmen concentrated their efforts on establishing a Public Buildings Commission.

Both efforts succeeded. A $6 million project that will keep Sears downtown will be finished this year. In addition, a new downtown cafeteria has been built on the same site as Sears. A $4.5 million county courthouse was completed in July, 1964.

What's happened since then in downtown Peoria has been dramatic. Caterpillar Tractor Co. is completing a new multi-million dollar headquarters building and a 1,500-car parking facility for employees.

Peoria Savings and Loan erected a new four-story building. A new 20-story, $5 million building is being put up by the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Peoria. The Voyager Inn is putting up a 100-unit project at a cost of $2 million; Security Savings and Loan is erecting an 8-story building. A new Imperial 400' 63-unit motel was built in 1964.

Many owners and tenants who vacated the Sears and Caterpillar sites have built new facilities in the central business district.

All of this construction is within one block of the new courthouse. None of the new construction, totaling over $50 million, used federal funds.

Cost to the local taxpayers was only the $4.5 million for the new courthouse, which higher taxes from the other new structure may well offset over the long run. To federal taxpayers, it was nil.

Moreover, once the construction of the Sears building and courthouse had sparked the spontaneous revival, construction of the other buildings went ahead rapidly.

No area was bulldozed and left standing in rubble and ragged for years, as may happen under federal urban renewal programs.

Instead, in a couple of years' time, Peoria got a gleaming downtown that gives promise of expanding even more.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jobe of Rockford became the parents of a daughter Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shoemaker of Mt. Sterling are the maternal grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keim, 254 Woodland Place, became the parents of a son born at 9:58 p.m. Friday at Passavant hospital.

Members of the Jacksonville Sportsmen Club will introduce the world's largest beef Bar-B-Que to Jacksonville area residents on Sunday, July 25, from 12 noon to 7 p.m.

Tickets for the food treat will be sold by members of the club throughout the area for a dollar each.

Like the traditional burgo, the beef bar-b-que will be the result of many and varied activities climaxed by 24 hours of cooking.

The whole beef, a black Angus, purchased from the Dick Arnold farm, will be put on the spit Saturday morning and cooked slowly over the hot broiling, controlled flames for 24 hours. The beef will be butchered by the Don Lakin Locker Service.

The annual fish fry, sponsored by the Sportsmen Club will be replaced by the bar-b-que on a trial basis this year.

The location of the Sportsmen's Club grounds is south of the city, just east of U.S. 67, about three miles.

Youth, 13, Reported Serious

A Jacksonville youth remained in serious condition in a Springfield hospital from injuries sustained Saturday afternoon when he rode his bicycle into the path of an automobile on Mound avenue.

A St. John's hospital spokesman identified the youth as David Ray Terry, 13, of No. 3 Sunnydale.

The driver of the car, Everett E. Tankersley, 44, of Winchester, was questioned by officers and later released.

A hospital spokesman said that the youth had sustained severe head and facial injuries. He was first taken to Passavant hospital and later transferred to the Springfield hospital.

Police reported that Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Terry, was northbound on Masses Lane, and according to witnesses failed to stop for the intersection with Mound Avenue.

Tankersley told police he had no chance to avoid the collision. Tankersley was westbound on Mound avenue at the time of the accident, which was reported to police headquarters at 2:58 p.m.

Smile, Smile, Smile

Considering the parlous state of world affairs, one might suppose that any effort to increase the number of smiles would deserve applause. In general, this is true. Word that there is to be a national smiling contest in Hawaii in July does not move us to applause, however; the idea leaves us cold.

An attractive smile is a pearl of great price, granted. The sight of such a smile tends to warm the cockles of the heart. But a smile, to be heartwarming, must be genuine—as Shakespeare noted when he said that “one may smile, and smile, and be a villain.”

Not that contestants in the national smiling contest will be villains; on the contrary, they will doubtless be personable young folk. But the sight of them, having smiled and smiled until their cheeks cracked, grimly saying “Cheese” once again for the camera-man, is not likely to add much to the gaiety of nations. For that, a hog-calling contest might be better.

Reaping The Whirlwind

The promise of a rigid police state is contained in a bill proposed by the government of the Union of South Africa. That country has been trying for years to herd the black population into ghettos. It now wants to do away with restraints on the police.

By the new bill possible witnesses in a criminal case may be arrested and held for six months. They would have no right to receive visitors, even their lawyers, and no appeal to the courts.

Another bill would forbid the publication in South Africa of all statements by anyone in the world who has “encouraged the achievement of any of the objects of Communism” or “has engaged in activities which are furthering or may further the achievement of any such object.” This could cover just about everything that the censor chose not to allow. These restrictions are so sweeping that they would forbid publication of the debates of the United Nations.

Obviously a nation of three million whites cannot permanently hold 14 million blacks in subjection. As the restraints become more onerous, they bring nearer the day of race revolution — which in South Africa could be bloody indeed.

Southern Challenge

The following statement, a variant of one often heard, was made recently by a public figure: “The South must adjust to the changing racial situation if it is to progress.” This statement was different from many others on the subject, however, because of its author.

Who uttered that call for adjustment to change? An “outside agitator,” as the racists describe all critics? No, it was said by Gov. John J. McKeithen of Louisiana. That is the state where the first Negro deputy sheriff in one county was shot to death in his cruise car without provocation.

Listen to McKeithen further: “If we holler for states’ rights, we’ve got to holler for states’ responsibility. If we can’t put a stop to murder on our highways, and murder or attempted murder by night riders, then we are not entitled to states’ rights.”

That is the truth, plain and simple. It is good to have it so resoundingly uttered by a governor in the deep South.

Dear Ann:

Questions Propriety of Kissing

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am taking a couple of courses in summer school so I will be able to graduate with my class next year. I don’t know whether all summer schools are like this one, but I have never run into a creepier bunch of kids.

There is one couple who claim they are engaged. The girl is 16 and the boy is 17. They kiss each other good-bye when the bell rings and they have to go to different classes. When they meet for lunch they kiss hello. All this goes on in the main hall right in front of everybody.

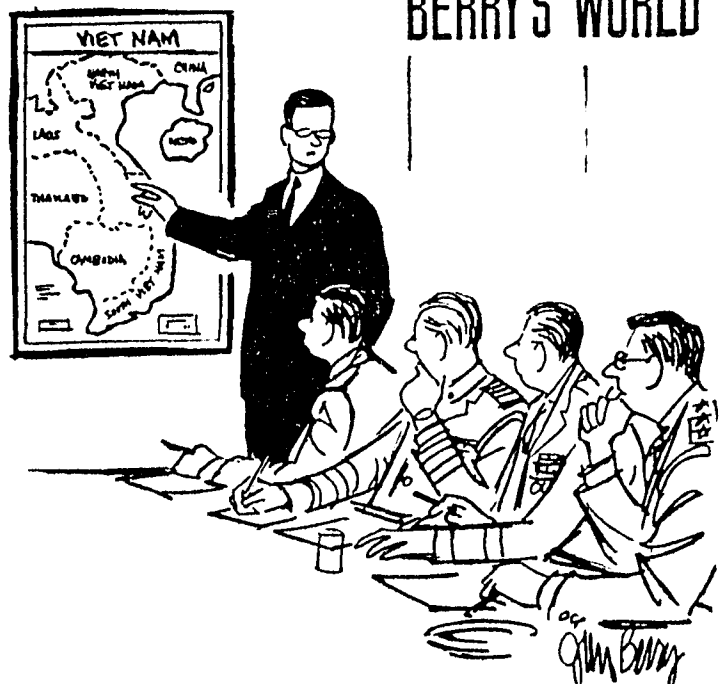

We were discussing these two at lunch and I said I thought they were sickening. Several girls said they thought it was all right for them to kiss because they are engaged. What do you say? —VOTING THUMBS DOWN

Dear Voting: I say there’s a time and a place for affection. School is not the place, and between classes is not the time. The fact that this couple is engaged does not make kissing in public acceptable. I’d like to know what kind of principal and faculty the school has — are they blind or just too lazy to move?

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem which is shared by many service wives. If you can help us we’d be mighty grateful. Jack is away from us for weeks at a time. We expect these long periods of separation. When Jack is at home he is too tired to discipline the children so the job is mine and I have accepted it.

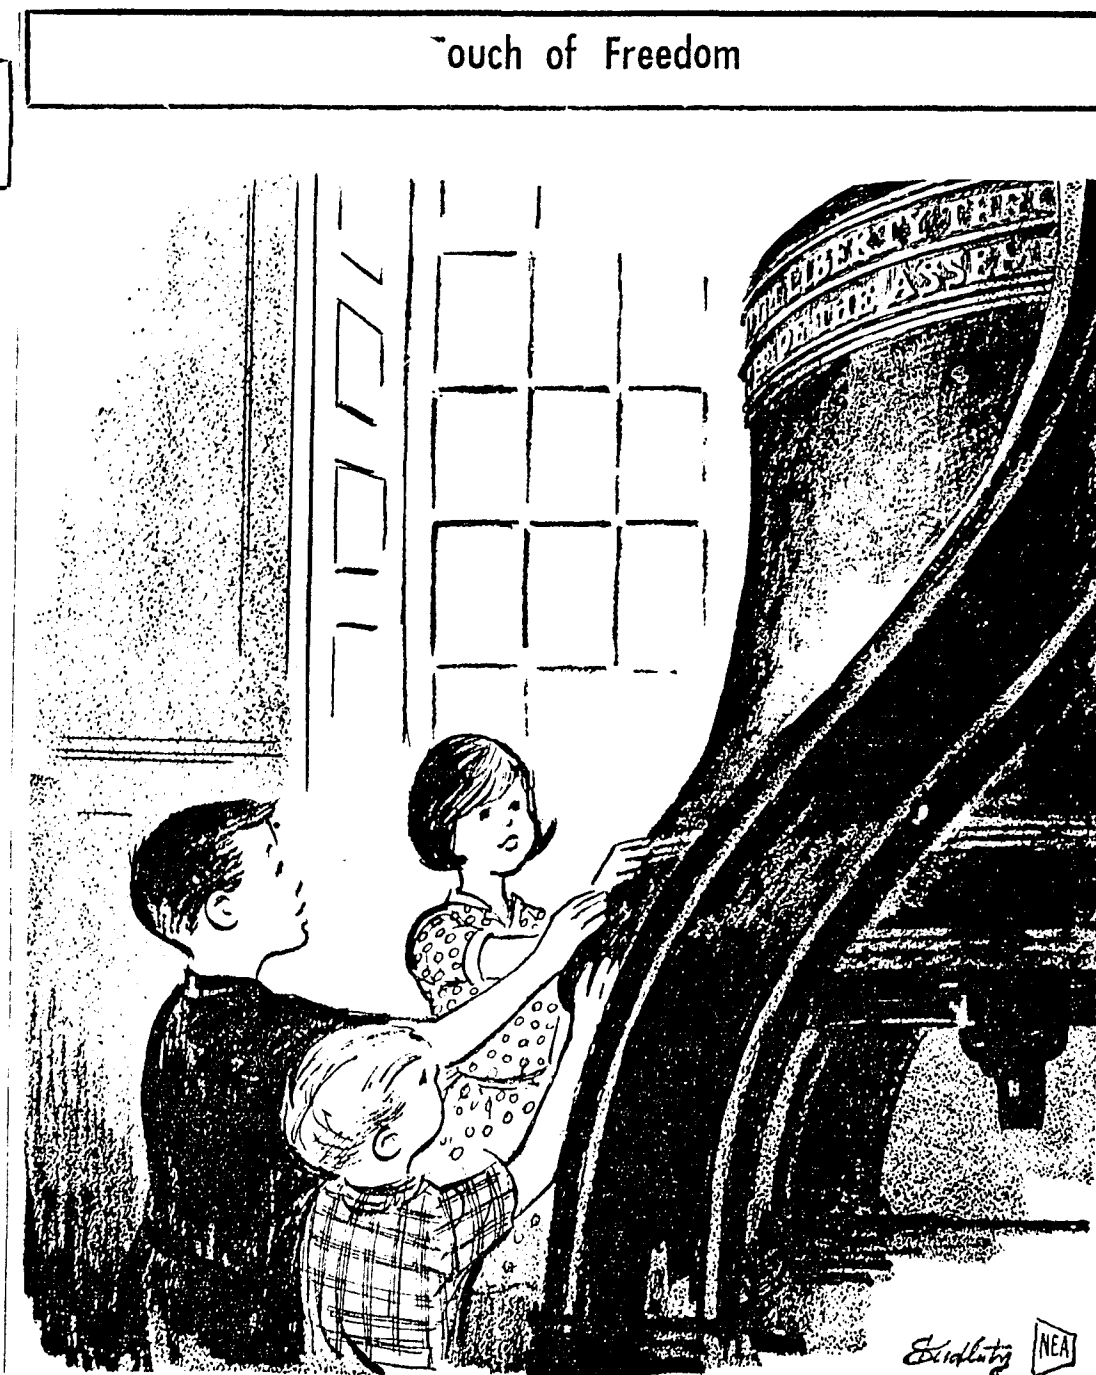

Our children are 12, 8 and 6. They look to me for everything. If their father tells them to do something they ask me if they really should do it. This hurts Jack because he feels that his children do not respect him.

I have tried any number of ways to make the children respect their father but it is useless. Please, Ann, tell me how to improve the situation. It is tearing me apart. —WORRIED ARMY WIFE

Washington Barry’s New Group Seen Splitting GOP Wide Open

By BRUCE BLOSSATT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
WASHINGTON (NEA) — No happy assurances from any quarter can now hide the deep, factional chasm which Barry Goldwater’s new conservative group, the Free Society Association, has freshly revealed in the Republican party.

There was worry enough over the earlier forming of other subgroups with either conservative or moderate — to — progressive coloration. This concern was somewhat eased, however, by awareness that many were more paper outfits unlikely to make a dent.

But Goldwater’s group is the breaking straw. Puffed with his prestige, led by a key Goldwater strategist, capable of attracting millions of followers and their dollars, it is seen by veteran party professionals as seriously divisive.

To some political observers, the undertaking seems to promise a not-too-subtle conservative blackmail over party decisions — a reasserting of the dominance the Goldwater forces gained in 1964 and yielded only reluctantly in early 1965 with the ouster of Dean Burch as national chairman.

For Ray Bliss, new national chairman and champion of a united party front, there is painful irony in the newest developments.

Bliss at this moment is earnestly bent, and fairly well-advanced toward giving the national committee the kind of expert technician’s renovation it has needed for years.

“Things are worse than I thought,” says he. But he undertook this enterprise only because he was able to persuade himself last January that all factions meant it when they said he was the one man to put them back on a common track after the infighting over Burch.

A few years earlier, Bliss had flatly turned down the chairman-ship when he questioned the warmth of support he would get from a certain key moderate leader.

His ironic position today is that of a respected professional busily engaged in modernizing the Republican party’s established structure while contending factions are narrowing and cracking wide its foundations. Bliss clearly is unimpressed by argument that Goldwater’s Free Society Association will have no damaging effect on fund-raising or other basic activities of the regular organization. Nor is it accepted that the new group is broadly Republican in character and intent. Its sponsorship alone marks it strictly conservative.

Goldwater says one big aim of the FSA will be to try to persuade many conservatives now threatening to bolt the GOP to stay within the fold. It is felt that some who already have strayed may be lured back from such organizations as the John Birch Society.

But again the question posed by veteran party professionals is:

“How do you entice these wavering conservatives without, in one way or another, promising them that their viewpoint will be not simply heard but will be decisive in party councils?”

These people openly declare their total disinterest in compromise or accommodation. They enter a party — or stay in it — to rule it.

This is the really big reason why broad-range GOP professionals believe that any Goldwater-led group which could capture the allegiance of “true conservatives” could not possibly be representative of the whole party.

It is the reason, too, why the formation of Goldwater’s FSA has sent plunging into the chasm the flimsy footbridge erected across it at the January Chicago meeting wherein the warring factions named the now beleaguered Ray Bliss to close the gulf and set them on a winning course.

A GLANCE Into The Past

10 YEARS AGO

Walter E. Emberton, veteran Jacksonville barber, died suddenly Saturday at his home. He was born at Bowling Green, Ky., in 1895.

W. H. Vigus, rural mail carrier in Ashland for 15 years and a former president of the Ashland school board, died Tuesday in the Marquette Nursing Home in Davenport, Iowa. He was born in Jacksonville in 1878.

20 YEARS AGO

Edward Blesse is the new president of the Jacksonville Exchange club. Other officers are Arthur Seeman, Larry Omundson, A. W. Miller, Jim Stubblefield and Bill Zachary. Cpl. Cletus F. Cully of Jacksonville has received the Bronze Star medal for meritorious service in the German campaign.

Miss Martha Brown, R.N., of Winchester has been ordered to report at Camp Carson, Colo., to begin her training in the Army Nurse Corps.

50 YEARS AGO

Secretary Carl Weber of the Chamber of Commerce says it will be several days before the new name of the Illinois hotel will be known. The 400 or more names received will have to be arranged and classified.

Macoupin creek has overflowed its banks three times this year. Last week’s flood carried most of the wheat shocks into the Illinois river. Some farmers replanted their corn four times, once due to the late freeze and three times because of the floods, and are bleakly anticipating very thin pocketbooks.

Due to the war in Europe this part of the country is about out of horses.

Most all the corn hereabouts is laid by.

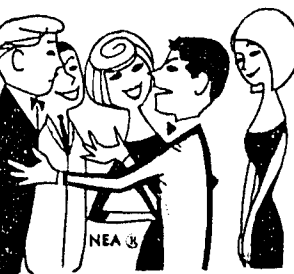

75 YEARS AGO

Some cuss stole two coops full of spring chickens from the rear of H. H. Hall’s grocery store Tuesday night. Mr. H. thinks the thief might have left the coops, anyhow.

This week will wind up the wheat harvest, one of the hottest for years. Much of the wheat has been cut in the night. The thermometer registered Wednesday 102 degrees, Thursday 107, Friday, 104, Saturday 100.

The census count just completed in Jacksonville is absurd, and anybody who has any knowledge of the city’s growth and improvement will admit it. It must be done over and we suggest the Business Men’s association appoint honest, public-spirited men to do the work.

Jim: “Look’s pretty difficult. May I assume that you did not make any really terrible error?”

Oswald: “I didn’t think so at the time, but as years go by, I wonder.”

Jim: “I’ve got it now. East returned a trump at trick two. You finessed and West ducked. Then you went over to dummy with a club and tried the finesse again with every expectation of making the rest of the tricks. This time West produced the queen and led a heart to East’s ace. East played a second club and you wound up losing two more tricks because dummy was now dead.”

Oswald: “That’s exactly what happened!”

FINDING THE WAY

‘Happy Fourth of July’

BY RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

No one has ever wished me a “Happy Fourth of July.” There would be sense in the greeting for this is the birthday of a nation which insists that the pursuit of happiness is an inalienable right of the human being.

The trilogy of “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness” is heresy in a totalitarian state. What is the version of happiness America offers to mankind on this anniversary of its founding?

The pursuit of happiness is dependent upon the pursuit of righteousness. In the end, happiness is a profoundly moral problem. The happy persons on July 4th are not those who are doing just what comes naturally. Happiness is not just tickling the fancy. Happiness is the by-product of vocation.

The happiest people are those who have strengthened their country because they have acted in response to their fundamental faith in God’s love and concern. They live in a country which protects this freedom to respond. Thus, it is no slip of the tongue to assert that the inalienable rights of man are life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness.

There’s always the difference between seeking after righteousness and preening our selves with self-righteousness. We Americans have been humiliated and are not feeling very self-righteous. We live in a world which questions us about our vaunted freedoms and asks us whether we really mean what we say we mean. Yet America’s strength is in recognition that while we have many tough and unsolved problems, we also believe that they can be solved. We act in the arena of responsible freedom.

There is an old story about a boy who was flying a kite beyond his line of vision. He was asked how he knew that there was a kite on the string. “Oh,” said the boy, “I can tell by the pull of it.”

Pursuing righteousness is believing that there is a moral law, and even when the possibilities are outside of one’s vision, still feeling the pull of it. This is the quality of character which protects and preserves freedom.

It is this goodness which is the rootage for the tree called happiness. On this important national holiday we pledge our faith that man has these inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of righteousness. Therein is his happiness. Let me wish you “A Happy Fourth of July.”

Boss Causes Job Woes

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: Our son is working as a messenger until he enters college this fall. I want him to quit his job. He is paid by the hour and his employer cheats him by discrediting the hours he works. Two other messengers—elderly men—get the same treatment. My son comes home at night very nervous and upset from the criticism he has to take from this man.

ANSWER: The gist of what one says to a boss like this is: “If I am as inefficient as your criticism suggests, isn’t it your obligation to fire me? You’re the boss here and it’s your obligation, not mine to fire inefficient workers. So let me put you straight about my intentions. I am not going to take your responsibility for you by quitting. And all the criticism you can give me is not going to make me take it.”

Tarely do we get fired. The nagging boss or anyone else, is only too aware that he is terrified of decision. He must pursue us with criticism to try to make us produce decision for him. So he is seldom so shocked as we imagine he’ll be when he is told what he knows himself. Usually, after such a showdown, he develops a clinging dependence on us that is almost as wearisome as his nagging.

I am not implying that youngsters, including yours, are perfect employees. As they’re not, their bosses are entitled to try to correct their mistakes. What I am saying is that when those bosses’ responsibility to take boss responsibility and dismiss them instead of trying to make the youngsters so miserable that they’ll do the job for them.

Keep Cheese Refrigerated

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—Is it true cheese should be kept in the refrigerator?

A—The Consumer Marketing Service of the Department of Agriculture recommends strongly that all natural cheeses be kept refrigerated. They give this further advice about using cheese: Soft unripened cheeses, such as cottage, cream or Neufchatel are quite perishable. Therefore, use them within a few days. But ripened or cured cheeses keep well in the refrigerator for a few weeks if protected from mold contamination and drying out. Leave the original wrapper on the cheese. Wax paper, foil, or plastic wrap protect the surface from drying. If natural cheeses do dry out and become hard, grate and refrigerate in a clean, tightly covered glass jar.

Natural cheeses may mold without spoiling. Just cut off the mold and use the rest. Blue, Gorgonzola, Roquefort or Stilton contain particular molds that are carefully developed to produce characteristic colors and flavors. These molds are eaten as part of the cheese. Keep strong — oiled cheeses such as Limburger stored in a tightly covered jar or container. These are fast curing cheeses and it’s best to use them fairly soon.

Q—My husband and I are now on a 1,500 - calorie - a - day diet. But he seems to lose faster than I do although we eat the same amount of food. How do you explain that?

A—As a rule, women on a 1,500-calorie diet will lose from ½ to 2-3 of a pound a week. But on the same diet, men will probably lose about 1½ pounds more or less a week.

Micronesia, a group of islands in the Pacific, so-called because of their small size, has been important to the world out of all proportion to many groups of larger islands. Yap and Guam were once vital Pacific cable links. Guam was a watering place for Spanish galleons. Truk was once a great Japanese naval base and the key to the Pacific.

Record Attendance At Hartsburg Station Field Day

If you have good soil, such as Iliopolis or Ipava type, you'll get your best corn yields by adding limestone, phosphorus and potash as indicated by soil test, using a corn-corn-oats-mixed legume hay rotation, feeding quite a lot of livestock, caring for the manure and putting it back on the land.

Additional mixed fertilizer, either in scanty or liberal amounts, usually produces some increase in yield, by sometimes not, and seldom is worth the money and effort.

That was the report heard Wednesday when 200 interested persons attended the annual field day at the Hartsburg Logan county, agronomy experiment station with Larry Miller in charge. It was the largest field day crowd in the history of the 54-year-old station.

Among the visitors were Morgan county men who farm either Iliopolis or Ipava type land. There's about 45,000 acres of the former and 50,000 acres of the latter being farmed in this country. In years past these men have learned that what works at Hartsburg works for them.

All are invited to visit the see the final results. As Miller station around harvest time, to put it. "Things may look mighty good at this time of the year, but the crops have to be weighed before we know whether we're accomplishing anything or not."

The corn, corn oats and mixed legume hay rotation was adopted by the Scully Estate Farms nearly a hundred years ago and is still being maintained.

The first photo shows a portion of the crowd on the way to the oats plots.

Oats is still a favored crop in the Hartsburg area. Yields at the station for the past two years averaged 82 bushels per acre. Miller said the fine old standby, Newton, is going to be replaced by better varieties, particularly Brave maybe Coachman, a new variety from Michigan. The latter however, maybe a little too late for this area, particularly if the early summer is hot.

The 14 varieties of wheat looked pretty poor, and was full of chinch bugs. Gage and Lancer will be best, predicted Harold Brinkmeier, Logan county farm adviser.

Although oats, corn and soybeans looked good the station needs a good rain. The place got only 1.1 inches of moisture during June, about what we got every time we turned around. The dry weather has been all to the good for chinch bugs.

Brinkmeier is recommending that all farmers in the area spray wheat fields and adjoining corn fields with half-pound of dieldrin per acre in plenty of water to form a barrier of 20 rows of corn and the same distance into the wheat stubble.

He said that generally speaking stands of legume seedlings are very disappointing and that most farmers will plow up their wheat stubble immediately and plant soybeans, combining if the season is favorable and otherwise plowing under the beans for green manure.

In the soybean plots Wayne attracted most interest. Sangamon County Farm Adviser Denver Corn described it as "the hottest thing going today, and there will be a considerable amount of certified seed available for next year."

Another new variety examined closely was the Bellatti. It matures a little later than Shelby and earlier than Clark, and may turn out to be a splendid variety for this area.

plot that has been in continuous corn for the past 10 years. Checking it over are, from left, are Tom Dineen, Prentice; Leo Maddox, Lynnville, and Jim Collins, Ashland.

Last year's top corn plots were in the C-C-O-H rotation with limestone, phosphorus and manure: 149.6 bushels per acre. The same plot, with the addition of 100 pounds of 125-65-125, made 144.3 bushels, a distinct loss.

The principal speaker of the day was John Pendleton, U.I.

agronomist, who is shown at left in the third photo discussing present research project with George Trull, Morgan county farm adviser.

Among the handful of high school students who attended the meeting were Dan Maddox of the Lynnville Hustlers and Tom Burrus of the Victory Ag club, shown in the final photo as they look over a plot of late planted soybeans that needs rain pretty badly.

Agronomist Suggests Early Planting Date For Illinois Corn

What's the right time to plant corn in west central Illinois?

John Pendleton, U.I. agronomist, feels that April 15 is perhaps the right time. That's what he said Wednesday when speaking to 200 interested farmers attending the annual field day at the Hartsburg, Logan county, experiment station.

Pendleton has long been an advocate of planting corn and soybeans in narrower rows, claiming that the 40 inch spacing used for so many years was a carryover from the older days when that space was necessary to allow a horse to walk between the rows. He feels that the results of his experiments during the past five years have proved his point, and now he's working on a new project — corn planting dates for the various sections of the state.

Back 15 years ago when farmers were afraid of the invading European corn borer the College of Agriculture recommended delayed planting, even if the weather was right; no earlier than May 4. The specialists pointed out that there was no decline in yield in corn planted from May 14 to May 19.

With the development of new and effective insecticides the corn borer is not so frightening.

What would be the advantages of early planting, Pendleton says: higher yield, because there would be more light during the period the ear is filling; drier corn (after all drying in the field is the cheapest way to dry corn), better standability because the plants will be an inch or two shorter, earlier harvest and with less field losses because of better picking conditions and because the ears will be a little lower, the farmer will have more time to do a better job of combining his soybeans.

What will be required to change to early planting?

Pendleton said: A brave heart, advance planning and the ability to forget tradition.

There will be reduction of tillage, "no working the field down to a lettuce bed;" the soil will be cold and the seed may be in the soil will be cold and the soil for some time before it sprouts, so soil insecticides will be 100 per cent necessary and pre-emergence herbicides will be necessary in most cases. Start-fertilizers which have proved effective and worthwhile in the colder soils of Minnesota and Michigan, will be found profitable here in early planted corn.

A full-season hybrid adapted to the area should be used, Pendleton asserted, and seed corn salesmen smiled broadly when he continued with "overplant 20 - 25 per cent because some of the weak kernels will never make the grade in the cold soil."

Many of his auditors did not agree with him but everyone was thinking about his ideas as they left the farm.

Which is all to the good. After all, stimulation of the mind is one of the most important functions of an agronomist.

Two 4-H Stock Judges Eligible For State Finals

The Morgan County 4-H judging team earned a "A" rating in the Illinois 4-H judging contest, held in Urbana June 29, announced George Daigh of the state 4-H staff.

Two members, Larry Martin of the North Side Ag club and Wayne Bloomfield of Berea 4-H club, were among the 49 Illinois youths to win individual "A" ratings and it is anticipated they will be invited to participate in the finals to be held in Springfield during the Illinois State Fair to determine the makeup of the Illinois team for the national competitions at the American Royal Livestock show in Kansas City in October and the International Livestock exposition in Chicago in November.

Other Morgan county members competing in the state contest were Jim Burrus and Mike Kershaw of the North Side club, Terry Bloomfield and Robert Reiser of Berea.

Tom Johnson of Berea participated in the dairy judging contest.

ILLINOIS OUTLOOK LETTER

HOG PRODUCTION CUT 10 PERCENT

Price Prospects Good For A Year

The anxiously awaited USDA spring Pig Crop Report was issued on June 21. Contrary to many expectations, it provided no evidence that farmers are boosting hog production. Rather, it showed that hog production is continuing to cut production!

If farmers follow through with the plans that they reported to the USDA, market supplies of hogs will be skimpy for 12 to 15 months. And prices will continue at very profitable levels until the fall of 1966.

Here are some of the more important facts from the report, together with our conclusions as to prospective market supplies and prices.

Farmers now are raising about 10 percent fewer hogs than they were a year ago, and they expect to have 8 percent fewer sows farrow this summer and fall than they had last year.

The 1965 U.S. spring pig crop totaled 43,227,000 pigs, 10 percent less than last year.

The 10 leading states had 42,480,000 head of pigs and hogs on farms June 1, 11 percent less than the previous year. The biggest reductions were in hogs nearing market weight and in pigs weighing under 60 pounds.

Notes these figures:

1. The number of market hogs weighing over 220 pounds on June 1 was estimated at 902,000 head, 17 percent fewer than a year earlier. Most of these hogs were marketed in the first two weeks of June.

2. The number of hogs weighing 180 to 220 pounds was listed at 2,757,000 head, 9 percent fewer than the year before. Most of them will be marketed before July 4.
3. Hogs weighing 120 to 180 pounds numbered 5,191,000, only 4 percent fewer than a year earlier. These hogs will make up most of the market supply from July 1 to August 15.

4. The number of hogs weighing 60 to 120 pounds was 8,058,000, or 9 percent less than a year ago. They will make pork mostly from August 15 to October 15.
5. The number of pigs under 60 pounds was 19,297,000 — 13 percent less than last year. They will make most of our pork supply from mid-October to the end of the year.

Summer farrowings are being cut 8 percent below those of a year ago, according to reports from farmers to the USDA. Farmers in the 10 leading cornbelt states plan to have 2,083,000 sows farrow in June, July and August. Pigs from these litters will make up most of the market receipts from January 1 through March.

Farmers also reported plans to cut fall farrowings by 8 percent. They indicated that they would have 1,907,000 sows farrow in September, October and November. Pigs from these farrowings would be marketed mostly from next April 1 through June.

The USDA report did not cover farrowings after next December 1. It appears likely, however, that farrowings will begin to increase during the winter.

A Long, Wet Wheat Harvest For Morgan

This is going to be a long wheat combining season.

The first loads coming into Morgan county elevators arrived June 14 and as of Friday less than 20% of wheat acreage has been harvested, and with indications that it will be Tuesday — even with the best of weather — that the combines will be out in full force.

Wilbur Kunzeman, manager of Central Soya, Meredosia, said Friday that "things have been pretty easy around here so far. The usual line of trucks that back up to the fish market and then back east and south to the highway have been entirely absent this year."

He estimated that probably 40% of the wheat on the sandy land around Meredosia has been combined, maybe 50%. Yields have varied, with most of them disappointing. One field made 54 bushels per acre, but there were more in the 20 and 30 class, some down to 15 and some as poor that they will be abandoned.

Quality thus far has been good, with test weights running 59-60 pounds per bushel. Most of the wheat received Thursday ran 15 1/2% moisture, far wetter than the superb wheat raised and harvested here in recent years.

Prices offered have been steady — $1.40 to $1.42 per bushel.

Most growers do not anticipate much field loss if they can get through the fields this week. But some fields are very weedy and the weeds are really growing these days, and in those fields harvest losses will be considerable if not combined within the next week.

Meredosia Activities

Elza Perry of Meredosia was guest of honor at a Father's Day supper at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Perry and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lathrop, owners and operators of a Meredosia grocery, attended a baseball game at the new Astrodome stadium in Houston recently.

Miss Edith Easley of Manville is visiting her grandmother, Lola Lerch of Chambersburg.

Ben Aaron and daughters, Joyce and Jackie, traveled by motorcycle from their home at Melvindale, Mich. to the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hurst and family of Meredosia.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clark drove to Illinois State University at Normal, June 19 to meet their daughter, Reba. Patty White of Chapin and Mary Jo Cain of Murrayville, delegates to the Future Homemakers of America Leadership Conference held June 17-19.

But the big increase in farrowings will not come until after March 1. And the big increase in market receipts may be delayed until after September 1 of next year.

Negligence The Key In Liability Cases

URBANA — A farmer is not liable just because someone is injured on his premises by his bull or his machinery, according to University of Illinois agricultural law professor N. G. P. Krausz.

Before a farmer can be held liable in most accident cases, there must have been a negligent action by him or by his employee while doing his farm work.

One of the best of the many court definitions of negligence is "failure to use ordinary care under the circumstances." Krausz says. The question of negligence cannot be settled apart from particular circumstances. Facts of conduct not present in one case may completely change the legal interpretation of another case.

A good rule to remember is that a condition or act that seems unreasonable to the average person is generally the type of negligence that causes potential liability. Some examples are leaving a dead dog unburied next to a neighbor's hog pasture, failing to repair a hole in the barn floor at the bottom of a ladder, leaving fences unrepaired so that livestock get onto the highway, and tossing a pitchfork to a hired man and asking him to catch it.

To help prevent liability, Krausz advises farmers to take these general precautions:

1. Always act reasonably.
2. Hire farm laborers who also act reasonably.
3. Keep the premises and machinery safe and in good repair.

FROM THE CORN CRIB!

A farmer was invited to sit at the head table of a woman's club banquet and being a little nervous of his position there asked his wife how he should make conversation with the guests beside him.

Knowing that there would be a lady both to his left and right he told him two good openers would be to ask about their marriage and then about any children.

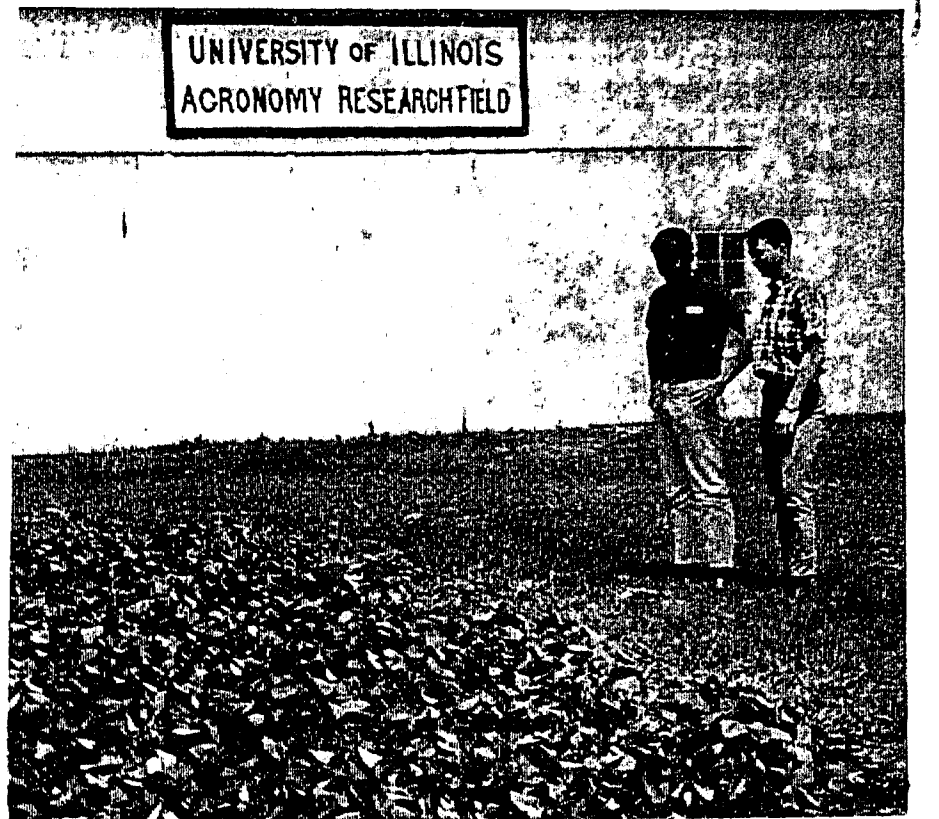

The night of the banquet, the man first turned nervously to the lady at his left and asked, "Are you married?" When she replied, "No," he then asked, "Do you have any children?"

After a cold icy stare, he turned to the lady at his right and did a little better by asking, "Do you have any children?" The lady smiled and answered, "Yes, three."

Thinking he was doing pretty good, the smile was soon frozen when he asked his second question, "Are you married?"

Why Missiles Came To Cape

By Walter B. Hendrickson, Jr.

there should be a string of islands downrange from the launching pads for tracking stations.

The place that met these requirements was Cape Canaveral (later renamed Cape Kennedy). A line drawn from the Cape to Ascension Island, 5,000 miles away, would pass over Grand Bahama Island at about 200 miles, Great Abaco at about 275 miles, and Eleuthera Island around 350 miles. The line then passes just north of Cat Island at about 500 miles, Puerto Rico at 1,000 miles, and the Virgin Islands at around 1,500 miles. After that the line crosses the Atlantic about half way between South America and Africa then passes over Ascension Island.

As you know, all the major U.S. space shots are launched from Cape Kennedy. But have you ever wondered why the launch pads were located there? Well, here's why Cape Canaveral (as the space port was then called) was picked.

After the Second World War the United States began a rocket research program. The first rocket testing range was set up at White Sands Proving Ground in New Mexico. (shown in the picture).

As the picture shows, this range was rather cramped even for the rockets of that day. The distance from the launching pad to the farthest end of the proving ground, on the North, was little more than 100 miles - less than half the range of the captured German V-2s that were fired at White Sands.

The V-2s, and other rockets of their range therefore, had to be aimed almost straight up so that they would spend most of their energy climbing to high altitudes. Even then the rockets had to be equipped with radio controls to shut off their motors if they went off course, which happened all too frequently.

Across The Border

This precaution proved inadequate when V-2 14 was launched on May 20, 1947. Just as the rocket ran out of fuel it turned south. The uncontrollable rocket whistled across the Rio Grande and crashed into a barren hill just south of Juarez, Mexico with a loud explosion.

After this controls were installed in all rockets to blow off their nose and tail sections. With their streamlining gone the rockets would then crash within the range.

Need More Room

With this added safety precaution the country's rocket engineers were able to gain enough experience to begin planning long range missiles and satellites. For these launches they obviously needed a base that was much less cramped than White Sands.

The site had to be in the continental United States so that missiles and supplies could reach it easily. The only place in this country with a 5,000 mile uninhabited range was the seacoast away from the major shipping lanes. Not just any

"To The Rescue"

By John Rankin

The saleslady at the music store flashed ten-year-old Sammy Taylor a cheerful grin as she handed the small package across the counter.

"Here's your harmonica, sonny. Ever play one before?"

"Not much. At least not very good," Sammy admitted with a boyish grin. "But I'll practice up plenty so I can play real pretty when we go to the mountains next week on my dad's vacation."

The young clerk smiled good-naturedly. "Oh, I see. You'll sit around the campfire at night and play your harp like they do on Wagon Train, eh?"

To Scare Wild Creatures

The bright-eyed youngster returned her smile. "Yeah, maybe," he acknowledged. "But mostly it's to keep off wild animals and things. Old Mr. Mosely down the street from our house says that a guy playing a harp or something can scare a whole pack of wolves something fierce."

Mom turned from the kitchen table as Sammy dashed in tooting wildly on the harmonica.

"Get a load of this, Mom," he chirped. "When we go to the mountains I'll bet I scare the daylight out of all the wild animals and things."

Mom Says "No"

A look of deep concern showed in Mom's eyes. "And also scare your father half out of his mind," she added. "One toot on a harmonica drives him to distraction. You'll have to take the thing back where you got it!"

The youngster's gaiety and enthusiasm wilted quickly.

"Gee whiz, Mom, let me keep it," he pleaded. "Cross my heart I won't play it even a little bit when Dad is around."

Mom was thoughtful a moment. "Very well, son," she nodded. "But see that you keep the thing in your pocket when Dad is home, mind you!"

"Gee, thanks a million, Mom," Sammy brightened.

Prayer Poem

Independence Evermore

By Mary Pence Claywell

A stormy sea... a wind-tossed ship,
A little group, with God-Powered grip,
Midst angry storms, men, stern and tanned,
Sought freedom in a strange, new land;
A wilderness, of vast extent
And Native tribes, that did resent
The white man's coming, did abound,
As the strangers took their "Hunting ground."

New Skills
Yet friendship grew, as both did seek,
And the white man learned to hunt for meat,
And then, with skill, he did adorn
The small, cleared plots, with "Indian corn."

Then the white man taught the Indian, too,
Who, many new things, learned to do;
And small, new groups that came each year,
From "Home Lands," that their hearts held dear,
In time, established settlements...

Nor trials, nor labour, did resent...
And they were happy, as they toiled,
Until the "Mother Country" foiled
Their plans for Freedom, and oppressed
Her children... in the Land, God blessed:

She taxed, and harassed, power to gain,
And so... the Revolution... came:
God Gives Victory
But God was with the little Band,
And Victory... blessed the New, Free Land:

The small Band thrived, and toiled and grew with Hope, and Faith, and Courage, too,
"Independent," it seemed, and Free,
Till... a new war broke... upon the Sea,
But the Mother Land, faced more defeat,
So... Independence was made complete:

As "World" wars came, blood, tears, and strife,
Became a part... of the Nation's life,
Yet Independence has survived...
Through Faith in God... and Sacrifice:
Dear Father God, far, far away...
We sacrifice again today... In other lands, Lord, far from home:

Be, Thou, Dear Lord, with every son,
And Bless the hearts, now full of care,
In homes, where stands, a vacant chair;
And give us Wisdom, Dear Lord, do...
And courage now, to lean on You:

"Unite us all, Lord, as we pray,
Upon this Independence Day:
And Father God, Reach down Thy Hand,
And touch the great, and little lands;
Revive the fearful hearts, and cold,

Thy Fold;
Almighty God, we kneel in Prayer,
And leave the future... to Thy Care!

Let's Go Birding

BirdsOfSummer

By Emma Mae Leonhard

This article, we hope, will not be disappointing although it may be disillusioning to some of our readers. Several times in June we have been approached with the statement from our friends and bird lovers:

"I have Bluebirds in my yard," or "At last I've seen a Bluebird right in my backyard." And there was usually the excitement of victory in their eyes.

Then each time we had to ask the question: "Did you also see the red breast?" The usual answer was "No, it didn't have a red breast; it was blue all over," or "No, I didn't see a red breast."

Then came the disillusion: the real Bluebird - the beloved "sign of spring," the bird of domestic love, peace, and happiness, the poet's bird - has a red breast, sometimes described as cinnamon-chestnut.

Blue Birds

We do not imply that our friends had not seen blue birds in their Jacksonville gardens, for there are blue birds here. There are Blue Jays, large birds with crests and white under-parts.

We welcome the rain! With a big, big, smile. For it helps crops grow, And it helps us smile.

YOUNG PRINCE - LONDON - A smiling Queen Elizabeth II holds her son, Prince Edward, 15 months old, as she waves to crowd gathered below her balcony at Buckingham Palace here as she reviews the Trooping of the Color.

There are Indigo Buntings, smaller than our common sparrows and blue all over, or so they seem, if they are adult males. Undoubtedly our friends have seen Indigo Buntings.

And the Indigo Bunting is no mean bird. It might well be called "sign of summer," for throughout the summer it can be seen and heard from telephone wires; from the tops of trees, a dead branch preferred; most often along dusty roads, but sometimes in the midst of a town or city.

Sings Summer Joy

On the hottest days it expresses a joy of summer with high-pitched song unmatched in enthusiasm and vigor by any other of our summer birds. It is the very embodiment of green leaves and sunshine.

Particularly during July and on into August, when other birds, except our Dickcissels, silently seek the cooler shade and the hot sun quiets insects, our Indigo Buntings seek the sun and share their glad hearts with all who will listen. Jacksonville is included.

RAIN IN SUMMER

How beautiful is the rain! In the broad and fiery street, As it pitters and patters down, Among the dreary feet.

Across the window pane, It pours, and pours, and pours. Then down through the gutter, With a muddy tide, It twinkles across the floor.

Then down at the brook! The water roars, Then it twists and turns And cries some more.

We welcome the rain! With a big, big, smile. For it helps crops grow, And it helps us smile.

Viet Cong Guerrilla Tactics Throwback To The Dark Ages

EDITOR'S NOTE — How is the Viet Cong able to do it? How can a guerrilla force survive the onslaught of modern weapons and go on to fight another day? Here is a study of guerrilla methods in Viet Nam, reported by a correspondent whose four years in the war area have given him many chances to observe Viet Cong methods.

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — You can pretty well reconstruct the way the Viet

Cong operates:

A small brown man squats underground in an improvised echo chamber, straining his ears for the slightest sound. Naked except for a black shorts, a long rice pouch over one shoulder and a belt slung with hand grenades, he has been squatting patiently for hours.

It is nearly dark in the chamber, except for daylight streaming through the sound slots around the top. Through these slots, the first sounds come, reflecting from the curved sides of the chamber and amplifying at the man's ears. Then the distant thudding of helicopter rotor blades.

The man, wriggling through a short tunnel to the surface, can yell an alarm. Instantly, shadowy men lounging or cooking at the bases of the tall trees are on their feet and moving fast. The heavy equipment from last night's battle has been stowed for future use in deep, camouflaged holes. The bodies have been buried.

Know Area By Heart

The men move rapidly, scattering in many directions in twos and threes. This is their base area, and they know every feature of the dense jungle in the area — the hidden trails, the camouflaged bunkers and tunnels the gun emplacements, the mines and booby traps.

Viet Cong positions were first prepared here years ago and with each month the positions have been improved.

The entrance to a tunnel might be under a heavy rock, it might be under the hearth of a peasant's hut, it might be under water in the bank of a mountain stream. Only by sheer luck would a government soldier find one, and if he did, he probably would kill only a few Viet Cong. The rest would be elsewhere.

In an air raid, some of the tunnels and bunkers would be crushed. A jellied furnace of napalm would ooze down into some of the air holes. But many of the bunkers would be deep enough to survive even direct hits by heavy bombs, and their galleries of men and weapons would survive. At nightfall, it would be safe to move around again.

Nearly always, the Viet Cong will know what to expect, long in advance.

The warning may come from the echo chamber. It may come in a radio message from a comrade miles away. It may come from peasants in the area, who either fear the Viet Cong or are more or less on the Viet Cong side. It may come from a bar girl who was drinking with government or American troops the night before.

Man Becomes Pack Animal
The South Vietnamese haul men and cannon and gear in trucks as far as they can, or use helicopters that may be limited in their landing zones to a few clear patches in the jungle. The guerrilla almost always will move overland, toting everything he needs on his back, and skirting the roads, unless he wants to ambush them.

When the government forces are finished for the day, they probably will move to some safer area before nightfall. Night belongs to the guerrilla.

In the jungle, the wilderness itself is the guerrilla's best friend. In the cities and towns, the guerrillas' best camouflage is people. A guerrilla terrorist in a crowded city looks no different than hundreds of thousands of other youths.

"We have yet to develop a machine that could tell at a glance whether or not a man is a Viet Cong. If we could do that, this battle would be won," a U.S. counterintelligence operative said recently.

So far, the powerful weapons of the 20th century have had little more effect on the Viet Cong guerrillas than did the British Redcoats, with their superior musketry, on the American guerrillas of two centuries ago.

It is a hard tactic to beat.

EXECUTION OF THE CONSPIRATORS, Mrs. Mary E. Surratt, Lewis Powell, (Alias Payne), George Atzerodt and David E. Harold, in the Prison Yard of the Old Penitentiary, Washington, D. C., July 7, 1865. From sketches by our Special Artists, D. B. Gulick and W. T. Crane.

We present, to-day, the final scene of that great tragedy which commenced in a theatre on the night of the 14th of April, and closed on the 7th day of July on the scaffold. Of the eight persons tried for complicity in the late infamous conspiracy, four only were adjudged to death—Mrs. Surratt, the Lady MacBeth of the hideous drama;

News, Views Century Ago

From the Jacksonville Sentinel: THE FOURTH — The celebration of the National Anniversary in this city on last Tuesday was attended by an immense concourse of people. We have heard the crowd variously estimated at from fifteen to twenty thousand people. They came pouring into the city by the endless hour, by the railroads, in carriages, wagons, and on horseback, until the streets, square and Fairgrounds were literally flooded with the living mass.

So great was the number of people assembled that everything accessible in the way of eating and drinking was consumed during the day. One of the wells at the Fairgrounds was drawn dry, and the lemonade, ice cream and beer provided disappeared before the heated and thirsty multitude with the most magical rapidity.

But the day passed off pleasantly — barring the heat and the dust — and all seemed to enjoy the patriotic occasion that had drawn them together. The leading exercises of the day were a procession, reading of the Declaration of Independence, exhibiting the buffalo, Indian "pow wow," &c.

Many of the people felt they had been short-changed; they had come to see a bunch of Pawnee Indians, on horses and using bows and arrows, kill a buffalo that had been shipped in from western Kansas by Dr. A. McFarland, superintendent of the Central Insane Asylum. But this exciting event didn't take place. Some person, or persons, unknown had slipped the Indians a five gallon jug of whiskey and when it came time for the "great buffalo hunt" they couldn't even get on their ponies, much less kill a buffalo.

The latter was returned to Asylum farm and there fattened up to prime condition before it was butchered a few days before Christmas. A large roast was sent to Gen. U.S. Grant and the rest of it was sold at a high price by the Woodman butcher shop, with the proceeds going to the Union Soldiers' Widow and Orphan Fund.

A RICH OPERA ENTERTAINMENT — It is seldom that our city is favored with a visit from a really fine Opera Troupe, but our citizens were highly entertained last night by Campbell & Castle's celebrated English Opera Troupe by which the splendid opera in 3 acts, "The Bohemian Girl" was rendered with fine artistic effect at Strawn's Hall.

The above Troupe will gratify our citizens with another performance tonight.

Thirty-eight Illinois post-offices, including Jacksonville, have been designated as money order offices. The system went into operation on Monday, June 30.

From the Jacksonville Journal: A WAIF — On last Saturday night, about one o'clock, the inmates of one of our respectable families, were attracted by the cries of an infant, outside of the house, and upon opening the door a babe, supposed to be four months old, was found upon the steps, neatly dressed and comfortably clothed. The little waif was taken into the house and cared for, and being a promising boy, was adopted as a strange but Payne, the desperate assailant of secretary Seward; Atzerodt, who was selected to murder President Johnson, and Harold, the infatuated associate of Booth.

The Place of Execution was a large grassy yard, surrounded by an exceedingly high wall, which was planted with soldiers thoroughly armed. Within the enclosed space the gallows were erected. It was composed of a strong beam raised horizontally in the air, about 20 feet from the ground; at irregular intervals four ropes dangled from it, each noosed at the end. At the foot of the gallows four coffins were placed, at the edge of four newly dug graves.

The Wicket Opens and a woman pinioned appears. She was dressed in black, bonneted and veiled and walks between two bare-headed priests. One of them held against his heart a crucifix of jet, while both of them uttered the service for the dead. After her came Atzerodt, preceded by two officers, a Lutheran clergyman and another armed guard. Harold came next, guarded in a similar manner. The most determined and dignified of all the culprits, Lewis Payne, completed the procession, which numbered somewhere about 20 persons, more or less.

When they reached the platform, the prisoners were placed in four arm chairs, stretching across the stage, in the rear of the trap doors. The warrants for their execution were then read to the prisoners by Gen. Hartraut.

The General Interest was almost entirely concentrated on Mrs. Surratt and Payne, for the obvious reasons that one was a woman, and the other displayed a dignity, worthy of a nobler cause. Mrs. Surratt was a well formed, medium-sized woman.

Her age was about 45, which she scarcely looked, notwithstanding the mental suffering she must have undergone since the eventful 14th April. That she was a woman of great nerve is evident by her bearing throughout the trial, and certainly now at the closing scene she exhibited a nerve never found in a woman, except in the very sternest cases.

At Twenty Minutes past one o'clock the limbs of the prisoners were pinioned. The caps were drawn over their heads. As the noose was being adjusted on Atzerodt's neck he exclaimed, "Gentlemen, beware," and then after an interval said, "Good-by gentlemen, who are before me. May we all meet in another world."

At 20 minutes past one o'clock the officer in charge of the scaffold made some preconcerted motions to the attendant soldiers to step back from the drop, and then with a motion of his hand the drop fell and the bodies of the criminals were suspended in the air.

The bodies fell simultaneously, and swayed backwards and forwards for a few moments. Mrs. Surratt appeared to suffer very little. Payne and Harold, on the contrary, writhed in apparent agony, the first for about two minutes and the latter for about five minutes. Atzerodt's agony, like Mrs. Surratt's, seemed to be of but short duration.

Citizens Committee Stirs, And Jacksonville Pot Boils

By ART HARRIS
"It's amazing how little stirring this town needs to get it moving," a member of the committee that has been "stirring" recently remarked.

"After all," she said, "it's had a hundred years to rest." The hand on the pestle has been moved in the past two years by the Citizens Advisory Committee, which was organized under compliance of federal regulations before Jacksonville could be considered for funds for its two government housing projects — low rent and a high rise complex for the elderly.

Although the committee is without authority, the group has the privilege of informing themselves "of their community's activities—in progress and contemplated — and the needs for improvement with respect to planning, code adoption and enforcement, housing, public facilities, urban renewal and other Workable Program activities."

They are also allowed to "investigate the community resources — public and private, present or needed — to accomplish these objectives."

Federal Green Light
When the city council gave approval for the study of a "workable program," they also gave the green light for the formation of the committee, which was specified under federal rules and regulations of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Since their conception, the committee has concerned itself with five areas of community activity — housing codes, recreation, transportation, a Day Care Center, and the possibility of "War on Poverty" funds for the city.

At their initial meeting, the committee was informed, "Recommendations to the city council and to the Morgan County Housing Authority will have great weight when coming from the Advisory Committee."

Through committee action and recommendation, housing, electrical, and plumbing codes have been approved by the city council; improvements and repairs have been made at Nichols Park pool; discussion and investigation was held on improving airline transportation to Jacksonville; a Day Care Center, which was formed by instigation of the housing authority, has been explored and developed by the committee, and at present, availability of funds from the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 for the city are being examined.

Programs Now Stirring
The committee for the present include a "clean-up, fix-up campaign throughout the city on homes and property to better educate the public on the various housing, plumbing, electrical, and building codes, and the legal possibility of the formation of a park district."

When the committee went into action, first on the agenda was the various codes for the city.

In the case of formation, and/or revision of a code, representatives from the various trades were named to a subcommittee with a member of the advisory committee to recommend the various codes.

The development of the housing and electrical codes were "other things that need to be accomplished under the 'Workable Program.'"

The housing code was passed by the city council in March of this year, and plumbing and electrical codes have been updated.

City building inspector Bryce Wall is now permitted, under the housing ordinance, to take police, the fire department, the health officers, to help him inspect substandard housing.

As interested citizens of the community, the committee opened inquiry concerning recreational facilities in Jacksonville — the Nichols park swimming pool in point — after learning that facilities had been determined unsanitary and unsafe.

Offer Aid To Park Board
The committee offered their services to the park board, and brought up for discussion the availability of family rates at the pool.

Presently under consideration by the park board is the possibility of a new pool, the moving of the picnic area to the north and constructing a new 18 hole golf course.

To alleviate the financial strain the park board has been under trying to operate the park, the committee is investigating the legal feasibility of forming a park district so that the recreational facilities could be increased at no additional cost to the Jacksonville taxpayer.

An early complaint voiced by a committee member in February, 1964 questioned the lack of air service to Jacksonville — so a transportation subcommittee was appointed to investigate the matter.

The result was short and quick — "there seemed very little chance of Jacksonville obtaining commercial airline service to the city."

Thus ended the life of the transportation subcommittee, but as soon as it died, another flourished.

William Cole, director of the Morgan County Housing Authority, reported to the committee that when plans were presented to the Springfield housing office, "serious questions came up about recreation areas."

"The Housing Authority must present concrete plans for recreation and recreation areas for the proposed projects. The possibility of a day care center was discussed."

Assist Housing Authority
The committee went to work on 12,000 questionnaires so that the center "could be included in the housing authority's plans."

Funds for the center would be available to the housing authority from an allotment which was granted Jacksonville during the 1940s but was never utilized.

Further investigation revealed that the federal government would provide 90% of the cost of operation of the center, not including funds for equipment, for the first two years under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964.

Presently plans are underway for the construction of the center, to be located in connection with one of the housing authority's low rent housing units on the northside of Jacksonville.

Through a recent meeting with Thomas Jackson, administrative assistant to Governor Otto Kerner, Chairman Freitag brought back to Jacksonville the proposal that the city try to obtain federal funds through the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, better known as the "War on Poverty."

Because Jacksonville is not large enough to qualify for a federal allotment for such a program, help to the city may be available thru a combined rural and urban plan.

A 28 member committee, composed of residents of the county and city, representing all walks of life, has been appointed to survey the possibility of applying for funds for another survey on the likelihood of federal funds for an "Urban and Rural Community Action Program."

Final consent for the study will hinge on approval from the three county commissioners and the city council.
Present Committee Members
Present committee members, and the organizations they represent are George Davis, former GOP alderman from the seventh ward, employed by the Jacksonville Journal Courier Company, representing the American Legion; Wilbur DeFrates, Republican alderman from the fourth ward, circulation manager with the Jacksonville Journal Courier Company, representing the city council; Mrs. Friedrich Entelbach, housewife, representing the Auxiliary Association of University Women; Wilbur Freitag, 8th vice-president of the International Hod Carriers and Common Laborers Union, representing the American Federation of Labor and the CIO.

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Roger Repoz, starting only his second major league game, homered, singled and hit a sacrifice fly, driving in four New York runs as the Yankees routed Boston 16-2 Friday night behind a 21-hit attack.

The big left-handed hitter shared the spotlight with Mel Stottlemyre, who subdued the Red Sox by scattering nine hits.

The Yankees completed the humiliation with an eight-run seventh inning spree in which Elston Howard hit a two-run homer.

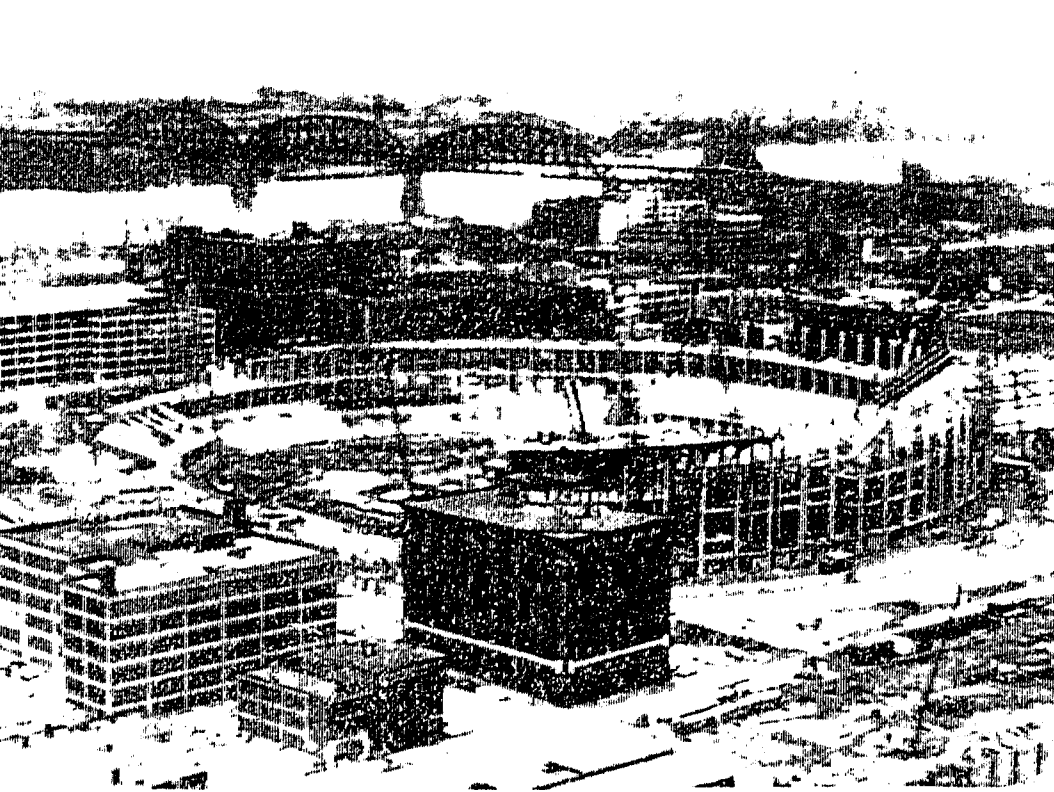

Repoz, just recalled from Toledo to supply needed punch in a line-up missing injured sluggers Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris, did just that. He settled the issue in the fourth inning when he drove a three-run shot into the right field pavilion.

Colavito Sparks Tribe To 8-0 Edge

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rocky Colavito drove in five runs with his 19th homer, a double and single and Lee Stange pitched a four-hitter as the American League leading Cleveland Indians walloped Baltimore 8-0 Friday night.

The victory was the Indians' sixth in the last seven games and 18th in their last 21.

Colavito provided more than enough support for Stange, doubling home a run in the first inning, hitting a three-run homer in Cleveland's five-run third inning and singling in another run in the fourth.

Dick Howser also homered for the Indians, connecting for a solo shot in the eighth inning.

Stange did not allow a base runner until Jerry Adair lashed a ground rule double down the left field line with one out in the sixth inning.

Baltimore 000 000 000-0 4 1

Mr. Sullivan Should Have Known Better

By SANDY PADWE
NEW YORK — (NEA)—Haywood Sullivan should have known that in the Alice-in-Wonderland world of Charles O. Finley you learn to expect the unexpected.

How else do you explain Sullivan's new job as the fifth manager of the Kansas City A's in the five years Finley has owned the team?

Two years ago, the A's decided that Sullivan was through as a player and handed him a bus ticket to Portland, Ore., and a slight reward for services rendered — the title "player-coach."

"When I left Kansas City," the 34-year-old ex-catcher said, "I frankly didn't know whether I wanted to manage or not."

"I figured I'd give the teaching end of it a few years and then if I didn't have it, I'd get out and do something else while I was still young."

After his apprenticeship as a Portland coach, Charley O. (the man, not the mule), gave Sullivan the head job with the A's farm club in Birmingham Ala., of the Southern League.

"Something must have impressed them," Sullivan said. "We were in first place for 121 days and we had a very young ball club. Although we finished second, it had been a good year."

Next stop: Vancouver, B.C., of the Pacific Coast League.

"I know we got off to a pretty good start," says Sully, "but who would ever expect this to happen?"

Precisely. The impatient Mr. Finley fired Mel McGaha in early May and announced Sullivan was his new man.

"If a lot of people were surprised," Sullivan said, "think how I felt. At the very moment they were calling me to tell me I was the new A's manager I was out looking for a house in Vancouver so I could bring my family up."

"It was a tremendous break. I realize just how lucky I was when I think of some of those guys who have been managing in the minors for 25 years."

The main reason the A's made Sullivan the manager is his ability to work with young ballplayers and Kansas City has more first-year players on the roster (seven) than any other club.

"I know most coaches and managers have a certain style that makes them different," Sullivan said. "But I honestly can't say that I do. Not yet anyway. Believe me, I'm still like those young kids out there — just developing."

With a team like the A's, the progress can be painfully slow. Joe Gordon, Hank Bauer, Eddie Lopat and Mel McGaha have tried before Sullivan.

Their reward — another one of Charley Finley's surprises.

Ray McCall Of Greenfield Dies Thursday

GREENFIELD — Ray Albert McCall, 78-year-old Greenfield resident, died Thursday night at St. Joseph's hospital in Alton where he had been a patient for two months.

Mr. McCall, a retired farmer, was sexton at the Oak Wood cemetery and later custodian of Greenfield Elementary school until his retirement.

He was born in Greene County, May 10, 1887, son of Albert and Clara VanMeter McCall. He was married Dec. 16, 1904 to Minnie Rice, who survives with a daughter, Helen, wife of Merrill Rice, of Wood River. There are five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

A brother, Cecil of Girard and two sisters: Mrs. Edith Swann, White Hall and Mrs. Zada Rance of Racine, Wisconsin, survive. Two brothers preceded him in death.

The deceased was a member of the Rubicon Methodist church.
